2017 Match Day

This year, Match Day was held on Friday, March 17 and was particularly impressive for Mount Sinai. Of the 137 students who participated, 40 students are staying on to train within the Health System. The remaining students will join other distinguished institutions nationwide – in fact, many of our students matched to the nation’s top 20 academic medical centers. Check out a video of 2017 Match Day here.

As indicated by the 2017 Match Day results, Mount Sinai continues to recruit exceptional students. To ensure that Mount Sinai remains at the forefront of medical education, we depend on our alumni to invest in the education of physicians- and researchers-in-training. We are grateful for your support and hope you will consider a gift to the Alumni Endowed Scholarship Fund.

When Patients Mentor Doctors: The Story Of One Vital Bond

A grateful ISMMS alum reflects on how her Seniors As Mentors mentor shaped her as a physician in this article in the March issue of Health Affairs.

New Institute for Exposomic Research

As one of the initial steps in implementing a new Strategic Plan for the Icahn School of Medicine, the Institute for Exposomic Research has been established. The new Institute—the first in the world focused on the evolving field of exposomics—will study the effect of environmental exposures on health across the lifespan and will translate these findings into new strategies for prevention and treatment. Creation of the Addiction Institute at Mount Sinai
The new Addiction Institute at Mount Sinai (AIMS), will conduct innovative translational research, integrated across disciplines, to expand insights about human biology and population health among individuals with addiction disorders. To address this tremendous medical and social burden, the Institute aims to develop novel treatment that is grounded in sound scientific evidence with the central goal of improving patient care. AIMS is uniquely positioned to pursue multifaceted approaches to reducing addiction, improving treatment outcomes, and addressing addiction prevention. Read more here.
