Walltopia, the world leading manufacturer of climbing walls, is proud to announce the launch of an open international design contest with potential to change the direction of the climbing industry.

The Harmonized System has the ambition to revolutionize the climbing industry by offering a mix-and-match modular system of climbing walls (lead, top-rope and boulders). The company's ultimate goal is to prove that a single system, with a fixed set of elements, can allow thousands of climbing wall design combinations for people to climb on, then share notable routes on a global network.

The prize pool amounts to 60 000 EUR divided evenly in two main categories - boulders and top-rope/lead walls. In each category there will be five awarded projects. Final selections is left in the hands of a world-known jury comprised of some of the most influential climbers, gym owners, route setters and climbing organizations from around the globe.

The deadline for submission is set for May 13, 2015. There is a Q&A webinar session planned with date to be announced soon. Participants are encouraged to send questions via email at comp@walltopia.com

All submitted projects will be filtered by a technical committee lead by Vasil Sharlanov, and if technical requirements are met, will be evaluated by the jury.
