News Articles

Denver-area districts approve new charter schools

Colorado Watchdog - June 24, 2016

Two Denver-area school districts have added three charter schools to their rosters in the past week, and one of those districts is considering allowing a charter to take over another struggling school.

Upstarts clash with establishment candidates in State Board of Education primaries

Chalkbeat Colorado - June 23, 2016

Two upstart candidates critical of Colorado's embrace of the Common Core State Standards and the multi-state testing consortium PARCC are challenging their respective party's establishment candidates in Colorado's primary election for seats on the State Board of Education.

Pueblo County hopes to set aside $750,000 for high school senior scholarships

The Denver Post - June 23, 2016

Pueblo County has set aside around $750,000 in college scholarships for high school seniors, and all of that funding came from marijuana excise taxes.

Can either of these candidates help swing the State Board of Education to the Democrats?

Chalkbeat Colorado - June 23, 2016

Of the Colorado State Board of Education races this fall, the fight for the 6th Congressional District will likely draw the most attention. The district spans a diverse mix of suburban areas to the south, east and north of Denver - from Highlands Ranch to Aurora, Northglenn and Thornton - making it more a swing district and not under the thumb of any party.

Three new charter schools approved by Aurora Public Schools board

Aurora Sentinel - June 22, 2016

The Aurora Public Schools Board of Education on Tuesday, June 21, narrowly approved three new charter schools to enter the district in the coming years.

Aurora school board approves charter school being eyed as replacement for struggling elementary

Chalkbeat Colorado - June 22, 2016

A divided Aurora school board Tuesday narrowly approved the application of a Denver-based charter school seeking to replace a struggling elementary school in northwest Aurora.

Englewood to open charter school in 2017

The Villager - June 22, 2016

Englewood has got itself a charter school. After nearly three years of rejected applications, appeals and transmutations, the application for a semi-autonomous public school in the city has been approved-this time unanimously by the Charter School Institute, Colorado's only non-district authorizer of such schools-after the applicants were repeatedly rejected by the Englewood Schools Board of Education.

Transgender students struggle with mental health issues, survey shows

Chalkbeat Colorado - June 21, 2016

Gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender youth in Colorado are more likely to plan or attempt suicide than their peers, according to results of a biennial health survey released this week.

Defiance, disruption marks raucous Douglas County school board meeting

The Denver Post - June 21, 2016

More than 100 parents, students and community members turned out Tuesday for a raucous school board meeting in Douglas County, defiantly continuing the calls of the past few months for two board members to step down.

Principal tasked with improving - and closing - Aurora elementary school: I have to give teachers hope

Chalkbeat Colorado - June 21, 2016

While Aurora Superintendent Rico Munn was making headlines for a proposal to turn a struggling elementary school over to a charter school - a first for the district - he also quietly appointed two of the district's strongest elementary school leaders to help improve learning while the district winds down its own program at Fletcher Community School.

Marijuana use remains flat among Colorado teens, survey finds

The Denver Post - June 20, 2016

One out of every five Colorado teens say they have used marijuana in the last month, but that rate has not increased since pot was legalized in the state and is in line with the national average, according to a new report from the state Health Department.

Mike Miles appointed to Colorado League of Charter Schools' board

The Gazette - June 20, 2016

The Colorado League of Charter Schools has appointed Mike Miles to serve on its board of directors.

What Colorado's numbers tell us - and don't tell us - about who needs remedial work in college

Chalkbeat Colorado - June 20, 2016

It's understandable if you missed the Colorado Department of Higher Education's latest report on a key measure of how well public high school graduates are prepared for college.

Despite boost, Colorado school funding is still below pre-recession levels

The Colorado Independent - June 20, 2016

If there's any topic that is almost as important to lawmakers as the budget, it's education. So what will be different for Colorado's rural schools in the coming academic year?

Monument charter school, district have tentative agreement on contract

The Gazette - June 17, 2016

After months of what some Lewis-Palmer School District 38 board members called "painful" negotiations, a 10-year contract between the district and its sole charter school, Monument Academy, is one step closer to being ratified.

Denver school board approves $628 million bond and mill package, new charter schools

Chalkbeat Colorado - June 16, 2016

Denver voters will be asked in November to raise an additional $628 million in taxes to pay for school construction and the expansion of educational programs after the Denver school board Thursday voted unanimously in favor of a bond and mill levy override.

Integrity matters - Recall Eric Nelson if he won't resign after being called out on career lies

Aurora Sentinel - June 23, 2016

Eric Nelson is having his lifetime "wow" moment at the expense of Aurora and pretty much all of Colorado.

Mike Miles appointed to Colorado League of Charter Schools' board

Colorado League of Charter Schools - June 21, 2016

The Colorado League of Charter Schools has appointed Mike Miles to serve on its board of directors. Miles is a leader in education reform and the former superintendent of the Dallas Independent School District and the Harrison School District in Colorado Springs. Miles returned to Colorado Springs last summer and started an educational consulting company, Third Future. He was recently tapped to lead the transformation of the Pikes Peak Prep charter school in Colorado Springs and is also starting a charter public school in Aurora, the Academy of Advanced Learning, which is set to open in the fall of 2017.

Tough path ahead

Vail Daily - June 17, 2016

Last week, a policy fight related to how struggling students should be counted and used in rating schools broke out at the state level, pitting education professionals on one side against education reform and civil rights groups on the other.
