

2018 CSTE STUDENT SCHOLARSHIP CONTEST

Attention Public Health Students!

The Council of State and Territorial Epidemiologists (CSTE) is holding a contest for one epidemiology student to attend the 2018 Annual Conference in West Palm Beach, Florida June 10-14, 2018. You could win funding for conference registration and travel to the largest national meeting for applied epidemiology.

CSTE Conference attendees come from every state, represent all levels of government and academia, and span diverse professional specializations. The conference presents opportunities to network with state, local and federal public health professionals. Last year, over 1,500 attendees shared methods and best practices with 650 presentations and 258 posters. Speakers included a distinguished group of leaders in the public health field.

After you apply, consider the benefits of CSTE membership as you build your public health career. Annual student membership is only $30 and includes capacity development and networking opportunities through specialized subcommittees. Members, especially student members, save on conference registration. CSTE's Applied Epidemiology Fellowship is also an excellent opportunity to pursue your public health passion.
