Promotional Events in Your Hospital and Community

Involve your community, family members, other hospital employees, and local businesses in your celebrations. Invite your local fire and police departments, emergency management, emergency nurse and emergency physician groups to participate. Consider asking a valued vendor or local business to sponsor and attend your events.

Speeches, Lectures and Presentations

- Security and safety presentations will engage the public in discussions about emergency preparedness and safety tips in the healthcare environment. Offer to give speeches or presentations to:
 - Students at local high schools, colleges, and universities
 - Members of civic clubs and social groups
 - Local businesses with large numbers of employees
 - Attendees at chamber of commerce breakfast meetings

Health and Wellness Fairs

Promote healthcare security, safety and emergency management by participating in local law enforcement and emergency management fairs.

Open Houses

Host a security and safety department open house. Submit a notice of the event to local newspapers for their calendar listings. Invite hospital staff, area business leaders, government officials, news media, community service providers, and the public. Discuss security, and emergency preparedness and safety initiatives and encourage attendees to hold emergency management and safety drills and other programs in their workplaces. Offer assistance in starting those programs.

Distribute Security, Safety and Emergency Preparedness Information

Set up a table in the hospital lobby, perhaps staffed by security and safety officers, and distribute security, safety and emergency preparedness information.

School Events

Invite local school counselors to the security and safety department at your facility to participate in a security and safety drill, presentation, or coordinate with local schools, PTOs, or park districts to host a security and safety program in your community.
