The College of Management announces a vacancy for the position of Adjunct Professor of Fashion Merchandising – Fundamentals of Textiles. Appointment is to begin Fall 2017. We are currently looking for an adjunct professor in Fashion and Textiles to teach a course entitled Fundamentals of Textiles. The course requires a full range of knowledge in the Fundamentals of Textiles, including information on fabric identification, construction, and characteristics; and the performance properties relevant for professionals in the fashion industry. Emphasis is on student experiential learning, making appropriate choices in textile selections for products. Course is an elective in the Bachelor of Science in Fashion Merchandising program, and is scheduled for Monday evenings for the Fall 2017 semester. Candidates should be knowledgeable about the science of textiles. Connections to the fashion industry are also vital to support the course and students. The ideal candidate will demonstrate a clear ability to teach in an undergraduate student-centered environment, and be of service to the University, community and profession.

Responsibilities include teaching Fundamentals of Textiles and relating professional, life and industry experience to student learning. A Master's Degree in an appropriate related field, with experience in fashion merchandising or the fashion business. College teaching experience preferred, especially at the undergraduate level.

Please submit a resume and cover letter, along with names of three professional references. Review of applications will begin immediately and applications will continue to be accepted until position is filled.
