The College of Design, Architecture, Art, and Planning (DAAP) at the University of Cincinnati invites applications for the Fashion Design faculty position in the top-ranked School of Design (SoD) at the rank of Assistant/Associate Professor.

The College of DAAP has as its primary mission the creation of a better cultural and design environment. The School of Design's role in advancing that mission is to prepare our approximately 700 undergraduate and graduate students to be responsible professionals and citizens in a complex and evolving world. We achieve this through a distinctive, rigorous, carefully sequenced curriculum that includes a substantial cooperative education program component dating back 100 years. This curricular model, expressed in classrooms, research labs, and professional offices all over the world, integrates practice and theory. It inspires interdisciplinary projects and builds solid corporate partnerships, and contributes to our strength as a leading design institution.

The School of Design aims to prepare its students to be skilled professionals who can competently work in local and global markets while respecting the diversity of the human community. The School of Design is innovative in teaching and in transforming the design disciplines by infusing learning with the newest design thinking methods and technologies. Through inspired interdisciplinary projects and solid industry partnerships, the School of Design is devoted to furthering its role as a leading design institution.

Our undergraduate and graduate programs empower students in our School of Design with a core of knowledge that provides a solid educational base. Our students are prepared for careers in fashion, communication design, and industrial design by a passionate faculty, rigorous academic endeavors, and a world-class professional practice (co-op) program.

 Within the Fashion Design Program there are two distinct and developed tracks: Fashion Design and Product Strategy. The School of Design also offers a Master of Design degree. The curriculum covers all facets of apparel design, technical design, textiles, design research, and fashion illustration. Students are prepared for careers in apparel design and product development, including apparel and soft-goods design, technical design, trend forecasting, branding, and merchandising. Faculty in the program have opportunities to teach in the Master of Design Program, and in cross-disciplinary teams within the College.

Responsibilities for this position include a full-time teaching load, which entails developing and delivering course materials incorporating theory, practice and practical applications in fashion design. Candidates will be expected to conduct and publish research in one's area of design expertise within the field of fashion design. They will also be expected to provide leadership, and contribute to a teamwork-driven environment. A full-time faculty member serves on various School, College, and/or University committees and carries some degree of administrative responsibility for curriculum development.

Minimum Qualifications: A candidate should hold a Master's Degree in Fashion Design or related field); have at least three years of experience in the fashion, fashion design, apparel, or textiles industry; and, have a minimum of two academic years teaching experience at the college-level.

The University of Cincinnati, as a multi-national and culturally diverse university, is committed to providing an inclusive, equitable and diverse place of learning and employment. As part of a complete job application you will be asked to include a Contribution to Diversity and Inclusion statement.

The University of Cincinnati is an Affirmative Action / Equal Opportunity Employer / M / F / Veteran / Disabled.

To apply follow this link: https://career8.successfactors.com/career?company=UCPROD search position 14990