On July 10, 2015 the three members of the MLA Education Task Force were sent the following charge from Minnesota Library Association President Maggie Snow to guide their research.

MINNESOTA LIBRARY
ASSOCIATION

MLA Education Task Force Charge July 2015

The Minnesota Library Association (MLA) serves its members by facilitating educational opportunities which are, in general, presented by the association's subunits at the annual conference and in the spring. However, it has come to the attention of the MLA Board that perhaps there is need for a subunit or committee that offers educational sessions that are relevant to librarians across the divisions and outside of the conference. Examples of this type of session might be strategic planning, budgeting, or presentation skills.

What prompted this conversation was MILE. Where does it fit in the organization of MLA? Up until now it has been functioning as a special committee with very little oversight. MILE has become such a big part of MLA that it needs a more permanent structure so that pertinent information is maintained.

Your charge is to discuss, investigate and make a recommendation to the board on the following questions: Would an oversight subunit or committee to oversee MILE, a not yet designed mid-career retreat, the website webinars and other educational sessions such as those mentioned above be a positive thing for MLA going into the future? Would it be of interested to the members? How would it be structured?

Timeline: Report and recommendation due to the MLA President by November 12, 2015.

Methodology

Prior to a face-to-face meeting, the three-member Education Task Force reached out to Minnesota Library Association (MLA) President Maggie Snow to clarify specific expectations of the original Charge so that they would best be able to address the questions that lay within.

Follow-up questions included:

- Is polling the membership regarding their needs a definitive element that you would like us to incorporate in our assessment? Or any other pieces you'd like to make sure we cover?
- What resources are available to us as part of the Task Force? Whom would we work with if there were things we'd like to send out to the membership, etc.?

The group met in person on August 21, 2015 at the Crooked Lake Branch Library in Coon Rapids, MN. Each individual came to the meeting having reviewed the Bylaws as provided by President Snow and brought ideas of how to tackle the task assigned. From the conversation, three major focuses were delineated.

1. Assess the current MLA Bylaws to see if and where a new committee may fit within its structure.
2. Review other state library associations to establish what they may provide in the way of professional development education on the specific topics of leadership and/or management, and any other general education opportunities they may provide.
3. Poll the current MLA membership with three "educational opportunity" questions to determine if they'd like more opportunities, in what format, and on what topics.

An initial timeline was developed and the group set the internal deadline of sending the initial draft to President Snow for comments/questions/clarifications by October 30, 2015, with the final report to be presented at the November 13, 2015 MLA Board meeting.

Committee Structure Recommendation

In assessing where a possible new oversight group for the MLA Institute for Leadership Excellence (MILE) may fit within the current MLA structure, the Task Force reviewed Articles 5-9 of the MLA Bylaws¹ which covered the various types of groups supported under the umbrella of MLA. The Task Force Charge specifically referenced the subunits or committees, but all groups were initially reviewed so that those deemed unfit could be eliminated.

The Task Force makes the following recommendation:

Whereas the current configuration of the MILE program belies structural similarities to other annual Special Committees like the Awards and Conference Committees, we would recommend that a new Special Committee on Education be created under Article 9.16.² We would recommend the MILE program be housed under this committee and any additional professional development opportunities created by MLA be developed and run by this committee.

We would recommend a five-person committee structure with the following positions:

- Chair – serving a three-year term
- Past-Chair – serving a three-year term
 - During the inaugural year of the committee this position would not exist
- Chair-Elect – serving a three-year term
- Two (2) Members at Large serving two-year alternate terms

MILE itself would continue to be developed and run by the previous year's class but the new special committee would serve as oversight and provide a single point of contact for the MILE co-chairs to ask relevant questions when planning and executing the new MILE retreat. The committee could also help in the promotion of the program in the off-year and help to keep alumni connected as classes continue to graduate from the program. The three year leadership structure is recommended to maintain continuity over the span of the current 2-year MILE model.

The committee would serve as a gateway for additional educational opportunities such as a mid-year management workshop, training webinars utilizing talent from the MLA membership, and other potential educational activities outside the annual conference.

Library Associations: State Research - Educational Opportunity Review

The Task Force examined each state library association's website to see what other associations may be offering in the way of educational opportunities. There was a large range from absolutely nothing to highly comprehensive opportunities in leadership, mid-career, and beyond; about one-third (1/3) provided education via an online capacity versus the in-person route. Some associations provided trainings themselves while others had close working relationships with their State Library organizations. From the initial review we were able to discern that 17 states provide online education and 19 offer in-person education; of these 12 offered both.

Almost half (23) offered leadership training opportunities. Many of these have institutes similar to Minnesota's MILE and several could serve as great models to expand MILE further or to develop external opportunities outside of MILE. Only seven (7) specifically indicated that they had models available on the topic of mid-career development, showing that while it's an important topic, it hasn't yet reached the more well-known model of leadership development training programs.

Of special note are items like Arizona's model of a Professional Development Fund of $10,000 of which up to $3,000 can be applied for by any group to plan and execute an event, Michigan's combination of Professional Development and Networking for their committee working as a think tank to garner topics for workshops and dedicated networking events, and New York's Leadership & Management Academy which is geared specifically towards mid-career librarians and management.

For specific details regarding each state, please see Appendix B.

MLA Membership Survey

The Task Force, in partnership with the MLA Membership Committee, was able to contribute three questions regarding professional development to the Membership Committee's recent survey. The survey was sent to all MLA members during the month of October 2015 and received 123 responses from across the state. The breakdown of those responses can be found below:

Interest in Educational Opportunities (Out of 123 responses)

Preferred Educational Format (Out of 117 responses)

Based on these questions, there is definitive interest in MLA offering further professional development opportunities both online and in-person.

The third question was posed in an open-ended format and was centered on the types of professional development topics individuals would like to see provided. 61 responses were received; categories which had three or more similar responses are below:

Professional Development Topics (most common out of 61 responses):

- 12 - Community Outreach / Engagement
- 9 – Technology
- 7 – Cataloging / Other Technical Services
- 7 – Minnesota Libraries & Resources (e.g., who does what, forums for sharing what’s happening around the state, etc.)
- 6 – Diversity Issues (in the patron community and in the profession)
- 6 – Management / Supervisory Issues
- 6 – Reader’s Advisory
- 5 – Collection Management
- 5 – Leadership
- 5 – Marketing / Program Promotion
- 5 – Youth & Teen Services
- 4 – Advocacy
- 4 – Instruction
- 3 – Storytime / Early Literacy

Please see Appendix C for the specific responses given.

Summary

It is apparent that there is a continued need for more educational and professional opportunities from the Minnesota Library Association. Our survey of the membership indicates high levels of interest in MLA-offered training and professional development opportunities on a wide variety of topics in both online and in-person formats. A committee dedicated to this area of need, staffed with enthusiastic volunteers, could help with the overall coordination and communication of the current professional development opportunities available across the various sections and divisions (ARLD Day, PLD Day, MILE, etc.) as well as the development of new and innovative ideas.

Of the state associations we looked at, 36 offered some type of education or professional development opportunities to their members, Minnesota included. Of these 36, 29 employ either a formal committee or interest group to structure these activities within their organization.³ Providing a formal committee with thoughtful and well-placed structure for continued and further development of educational opportunities within MLA is the next logical step. Outside of the structural recommendations of the Task Force for an education committee of some sort, the state association research can be used as a beginning step to see what other prospects might be made available within our own library community.

The building of an educational hub within MLA that reaches out across all types of libraries and into all four corners of the state is no small task, and we thank the MLA Board for the opportunity to be involved in the initial research into this topic.

³ Three had interest groups dedicated to the topics while 26 had formal committees.

Committee consists of representatives from their four Divisions (school, public, special, academic), State Library, and Conference Planning. Their library leadership and scholarships falls under the AZ State Library (http://www.azlibrary.gov/libdev/continuin-g-education).	http://www.azla.org/

California (CLA)			x		Offers Mentoring Program (http://www.clanet.org/?page=319). Has Leadership Development Committee (http://www.clanet.org/?LeadershipDevelop). The California State Library in partnership with InfoPeople has the Eureka! Leadership Program (eurekaleadership.org/index.html) Could serve as a future expansion model for the MILE, or a secondary level = MILE 2.0? Initial six-day event with a follow up two-day, and then another two day anniversary event one year after the Institute. -- Much more intentional, but focused particularly on public libraries.	http://www.clanet.org/

Colorado (CAL)			x		Leadership Development Committee (http://www.cal-webs.org/?page=LeadershipDevCom). Has a leadership institute called CALLI (CAL Leadership Institute) with a yearlong curriculum with monthly topics after the initial retreat (http://c.ymcdn.com/sites/www.cal-webs.org/resource/resmgr/calli/curric_overview_calli2012-13.pdf). Could serve as a future expansion model for the MILE.	http://www.cal-webs.org/
Connecticut (CLA)				x	Career Development Committee (http://ctlibraryassociation.org/content.php?page=Sections_and_Committees). Broad spectrum for the charge: This committee is concerned with policies, procedures, and problems related to library employment, staff welfare, continuing education, career development, and recruitment. It develops and recommends policies and guidelines related to the improvement of salaries, working conditions, employer/employee relations, and informs Association members of these policies and guidelines.	http://ctlibraryassociation.org/index.php
Delaware (DLA)					DLA offers scholarships for professional development. Otherwise their Continuing Education section basically is links to outside programs.	http://dla.lib.de.us/
Florida (FLA)			x	x	FLA has a Continuing Education committee, a Leadership Development Committee, and a Library Career Development Committee but all that are listed are the rosters. Through the Florida State Library there's the Sunshine State Library Leadership Institute [SLLI] (http://dos.myflorida.com/library-archives/services-for-libraries/more-programs/leadership/sunshine-state-library-leadership-institute/). 10 Sessions across the year.	http://www.flalib.org/
Georgia (GLA)			x	x	GLA has a Professional & Continuing Education Interest Group (http://gla.georgialibraries.org/interest_pce.htm). Hawai'i (HLA)					HLA has a section for Continuing Education under their Programs & Events area but nothing is listed.	http://hawaiilibraryassociation.weebly.com/

Idaho (ILA)			x		ILA has created the Library Leadership Action Committee (http://idaholibraries.org/resources/library-leadership-in-idaho/) which works on building a leadership web portal, Read-2-Lead book club, a newsletter, mentor page, identifies leadership training opps, etc. They also showcase the Idaho ALA Emerging Leaders (http://idaholibraries.org/idahobookaward/idahos-emerging-leader/).	http://idaholibraries.org/
Illinois (ILA)		x	x	x	Provides a specific single-day professional development conference called Reaching Forward (reachingforward.net). This is done in addition to their regular conference. The program from their 2015 looks fairly similar to what we might offer at our regular conference so I'm uncertain as to how it differs from their standard ILA conference. Additionally they have something on their website listed as a Knowledge Exchange, though there's no further information regarding what exactly that is and you must be a member to login.	https://www.ila.org/
Indiana (ILF) - Indiana Library Federation	x			x	There is an ILF Management Division which "provides a forum for the networking and support of librarians working in management positions." They also have a dedicated Mentoring Program with a handbook of guidelines and then someone from the Management Division periodically checks in with the pair for assessment. In partnership with PeopleConnect Institute, the ILF offers webinars hosted live and then archived on the website.	http://ilfonline.site-ym.com/
Iowa (ILA)			x		Provides a dedicated Leadership Development Committee who helps to plan the ILA Leadership Institute. (May serve as some basic structure for a new MLA committee?). There's not much listed for particulars regarding the Institute -- no standard website, etc. -- but a committee report from 2014 shows that its general structure (multi-day event, 25 librarians) is similar. They specifically though have ALA Past President Maureen Sullivan participate in the event and help support this through an LSTA grant, amongst other funding. The Committee itself also presents at conferences.	http://www.iowalibraryassociation.org/

Kansas (KLA)					Although they state in their Strategic Plan that they support continuing education through various models there's nothing dedicated to it on their library association website.	http://kslibassoc.org/home/
Kentucky (KLA)	x	x	x		Mentoring committee pairs mentors and mentees through online application. Webinars available online to association members. Academic Libraries section has own Professional Development Committee. Maine (MLA)					Website lists a Conference and Continuing Education Committee among their standing committees, but unlike the rest of the committees, no contact person or info is listed. It looks like the committee may be currently inactive.	http://mainelibraries.org/
Maryland (MLA)	x	x	x		Maryland Library Leadership Institute (MLLI) is the MD version of MILE. There is a MLLI Chair who is a non-voting member of the association's advisory council. They also have an appointed officer for professional development that sits on the Executive Board. MLLI and other CE initiatives are under the LDD (Leadership Development Division) of the association. This division meets bimonthly, and hosts webinars and events and programs on an ongoing (year-round) basis around the state.	http://www.mdlib.org/
Massachusetts (MLA)					Nothing listed.	http://www.masslib.org/

Michigan (MLA)	x	x	x		Professional Development and Networking is a standing committee with a chair and 7 other members. There are separate workgroups for their annual conference and spring institute (conference for youth-serving librarians). The PD&N Committee "anticipates emerging trends and hot topics. Works with staff as a think tank for ideas and insight to help identify the kinds of training our members will need to excel in the libraries of the future as well as today. Members must have prior experience on an MLA work group to participate on this committee." MLA also offers an ongoing mentor-mentee matching program, networking and PD events and "communities of practice listservs"/themed email discussion lists.	http://www.milibraries.org/

Technology-based training
Small, one room rural libraries: ideas for programming with a little budget/staff; outreach to the rural communities; PR strategies to combat the VERY REAL perception from farmer families that their sons "don't have to know how to read." HOW do we change this perception????
how to help the profession become more diverse and more welcoming of diversity--it's more than just paying lip service to an ideal, everyone has to be onboard and acknowledge that it's important and a goal that needs to be worked towards as a group, while also knowing that there will be missteps Panels where I can hear from a few different libraries on how they handle or are doing "x." For example, what about a webinar on how libraries have implemented any of the trends mentioned at MLA during the keynote from the ALA Center for the Future of Libraries.
marketing to non-users
I would be very interested in seeing events about community outreach and how libraries are accomplishing that. Also events on community programming, boosting awareness and attendance and what sorts of events communities are responding positively to/expressing interest in.

Working with Library Boards, Board development for existing Boards, Assistance to patrons in a networked world, how to we do this, train staff to be flexible? How to create and be part of Open Source communities with librarians as the "table" Librarians as creation specialist, how does that happen, what does staff need to learn? Libraries changing the way they do work, what is happening? and how? Today, not tomorrow. Paying attention to the digital shift in work, how our patrons work and how librarians must also.
Always interested in current Teen and Youth services practices and Reader's Advisory in general..

Reader's Advisory!
Bringing STEAM into libraries, Makerspaces,
Focus on technical services (cataloging, metadata, digital resource management, etc.)
I'm open on any training. If it is something I see applying to my library, I might bite. I especially like meetings to which I can send staff, get them out of the library and let them have a day to just think library rather than be stuck in their existing daily rut. Because of our far-flung location, these kinds of opportunities are rare, but I'm constantly on the watch.
