Assistance Sought by NFRC 101 Thermophysical Properties of Materials Task Group

To more accurately reflect the materials and technologies used in building current and future windows, doors, and skylights, the NFRC 101 Thermophysical Properties of Materials Task Group is interested in revising and adding materials and thermophysical property data to the generic materials listings in NFRC 101.

NFRC is seeking assistance in identifying additional specific generic materials for potential inclusion in the NFRC 101 generic materials lists. These new material suggestions can represent generic materials that are notably absent or new applications of existing materials used in current or future fenestration designs.

More information on what is needed is explained in this letter from the members of the task group.
