

February 9, 2017

In recognition of recent events potentially limiting immigration into the United States for certain individuals, the Society of Abdominal Radiology remains committed to fostering relationships with our radiology colleagues throughout the world regardless of race, gender, faith or country of origin. We recognize that a significant number of physicians practicing in our country are born outside the United States and we respect their important contributions to patient care, education and scientific discovery. The SAR continues to value our international colleagues through international lectures at our annual meeting, the annual SAR International Education Conference, and bestowing honorary membership on international members. The Society of Abdominal Radiology welcomes our international colleagues in pursuing our mission to advance patient health by the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of abdominal disease through education, research, and interdisciplinary collaboration.
