ABOUT THIS GUIDE

This Guide was prepared as a public service by the Association of Collegiate Schools of Planning (ACSP), a consortium of university-based programs offering degrees and credentials in urban and regional planning. ACSP hopes to encourage a wide range of high school and undergraduate students to consider a degree in planning which will lead them to a rewarding and challenging career.

The Guide is a resource designed to help you explore this possibility, learn about the variety of educational programs that lead to different careers in planning and related fields, and identify the programs that best match your needs, interests, and career goals.

WHAT DO PLANNERS DO?

Planning is a systematic, creative way to influence the future of neighborhoods, cities, rural and metropolitan areas, even the country and the world. Urban and regional planners use their professional skills to serve communities facing social, economic, environmental, and cultural challenges by helping community residents to:

- develop ways to preserve and enhance their quality-of-life;
- find methods to protect the natural and built environment;
- identify policies to promote equity and equality;
- structure programs to improve services to disadvantaged communities; and
- determine methods to deal effectively with growth and development of all kinds.

Having a planning degree enables you to do many types of jobs and be involved in almost any kind of government or private activity that seeks to affect the future, or respond to community change. The majority of planners work in traditional planning areas such as community development, land use, transportation planning, environmental/natural resources planning, economic development, urban design, housing, historic preservation and community activism. However, individual planners may have a wide variety of responsibilities within these broadly defined specialties. Other planners work in less traditional areas, often with people from other disciplines in fields such as healthy communities, energy development or school planning. Some planners become generalists. They develop a level of expertise in several substantive areas. Others become specialists and define themselves as housing or transportation or environmental planners.

Most planners share a common set of skills and values even though they may specialize in one or two substantive areas. Using their “planning toolkit” they:

- involve all affected parties in important planning decisions;
- help communities develop their own vision of the future, preparing plans responsive to shared community objectives;
- analyze qualitative and quantitative information to suggest possible solutions to complex problems;
- evaluate the cost-effectiveness of proposed projects and plans; and
- present recommendations to public officials and citizen groups in a comprehensive and understandable way.

Planners work in government, with non-profit agencies, and in private industry. Those in the public sector often work for city or county governments or regional planning agencies but there are also planning jobs at the State and Federal level. International organizations like the United Nations and the World Bank also employ planners. Planners with jobs in the private sector can work with utility companies, law firms, real estate developers, and planning consultants. Planners also work in the non-profit sector and with non-governmental agencies like the United Way or community development organizations or advocacy groups for the elderly.

In their jobs, some planners have responsibility for specific geographic areas such as individual neighborhoods in a city or region; within those areas they may provide assistance on a variety of substantive issues from land use to transportation. Other planners have substantive responsibilities—such as housing or environmental planning—and provide assistance in their specific specialization to many communities within a city or region. Some planners work on projects that will be completed within a year or two while others focus their efforts on projects many years in the future.

While you may think of planning as an urban activity, it actually occurs in communities of all sizes. Many planners work in small cities, in rural areas, and for Indian Nations. Others work in suburban neighborhoods at the periphery of large regions while still others have jobs in the dense core of major metropolitan areas.

SPECIALIZATIONS

Today planners may move back and forth between jobs in the public, non-profit, and private sectors over the course of their career. They may also work for different levels of government at different times. They may change their specialties or their focus long after they leave school in response to on-the-job experiences, or the opportunity for new challenges.

Many planners develop a specialized body of expertise, and that is reflected both in the professional world and in the programs included in this Guide. There are a variety of possibilities; these are the most common planning specializations:

Land Use Planning
There are many different kinds of land use planning jobs. Some land use planners develop ways to encourage growth or development in certain communities or along appropriate corridors while others work to discourage growth in environmentally sensitive areas or where supporting services cannot be effectively provided. Some land use planners work on long-range comprehensive plans which are designed to coordinate all the important activities in which a community engages—housing, recreation, transportation, water and air quality, and so forth. Some land use planners help develop or administer local regulations which establish the kind of housing, industrial, and retail facilities that can be built in cities and counties. Others develop ways to finance public services while still other land use planners evaluate the impact of proposed residential or commercial development and suggest ways for communities to respond.

Many land use planners coordinate their activities with other kinds of planners in order to protect open space and agricultural land in the face of increasing demands for new homes and businesses.

Environmental Planning
Environmental planners work to enhance the physical environment and minimize any negative impacts of development. Some environmental planners focus on scientific and technical questions while others develop policies and programs to encourage the public to protect natural resources. Some planners develop expertise in one aspect of resource management while others attempt to identify the environmental implications of a range of government policies or proposed land use changes.

Other environmental planners focus on cleaning up polluted areas or resources, or work on preventing contamination and the destruction of ecosystems. Many environmental planners work to integrate a concern about pollution and the conservation of non-renewable resources into the plans developed in other substantive areas like housing, transportation or economic development.

Economic Development Planning
Economic development planners, in North America and internationally, work to improve a community or region by expanding and diversifying the economic activities that support the families living there. Many planners do so by helping develop plans to attract businesses that create new jobs and provide additional tax revenues; others work to keep businesses from leaving distressed areas.

Economic development planners at the local level often work to promote the special features of their community, sometimes by encouraging tourism or additional recreational opportunities. Some planners develop projects that bring housing and commercial enterprises as well as jobs into disadvantaged neighborhoods. Some economic development planners help communities find ways to finance the cost of new development while others work to overcome regulatory and other barriers to new projects.

Economic development planners often work in conjunction with land use, housing, social and community planners to address the needs of distressed communities or declining business districts.

Transportation Planning

Transportation planners help develop programs to meet the current transportation needs of families and businesses, locally and across a region; they also work to predict future travel patterns in order to identify the need for additional transportation services and facilities. Some transportation planners are very technically oriented and work with advanced computer technology; others deal with the social and economic aspects of travel. Some focus on one mode such as bicycling or public transit while others attempt to plan for multiple modes.

Transportation planners working for local governments often respond to traffic congestion; others develop ways to finance new facilities. Some transportation planners help develop programs that are designed to encourage people to drive less, or provide home-to-work options for welfare recipients trying to find jobs, or organize special transportation services for the elderly.

Many transportation planners coordinate their activities with environmental, land use, and economic development planners.

Housing and Community Development Planning

Many planners practice in these overlapping areas. Housing planners help develop strategies to increase the supply of affordable housing and expand home ownership among low income or disadvantaged groups. These planners often try to create incentives and remove constraints on private home builders or work with public or non-profit organizations to build housing units for low income families or senior citizens.

Many housing planners try to encourage mixed use developments offering services and jobs closer to where people live; others promote projects that provide housing opportunities for people from a mixture of income levels. Planners concerned with the social aspects of a community often combine their interest in housing with efforts to increase the overall quality of life for low-income or minority neighborhoods.

Many housing and community planners work to improve multiple aspects of a targeted neighborhood, combining many substantive planning skills from economic development to urban design. For example, community and housing planners may work to improve transit service in disadvantaged communities, develop job training programs for unemployed communities, or provide better public health facilities in low income neighborhoods. These planners often work with land use and transportation planners.

CAREER POSSIBILITIES

Career paths in planning are very diverse. In addition to the substantive areas described above, your planning degree will help you find work in:

- geographic information systems
- public and community health
- historic preservation
- coastal management
- mediation and negotiation
- criminal justice
- public finance
- public policy and management
- urban design
- elementary, secondary and collegiate education
- labor force development
- human services
- law

A variety of resources are available to help you explore the career possibilities to which an education in planning might lead.

- For ACSP’s own collection of planner and planning educator biographies, visit Education and Careers in Planning.
- On their website the American Planning Association (APA) has a section called Jobs and Practice which describes: the profession; career fundamentals; planning education; how to search for and land a planning job; and how planning fits into other associated careers.
- The Canadian Institute of Planners (CIP) has a page called Planning as a Career at their website which also lists many planning jobs, and what skills and values you may need if planning is the career for you.
WILL I GET A JOB? YES!!

There are promising career opportunities in every planning specialization, although sometimes there is more need for one specialization than another. Most planning degree programs help you get a “jump start” on finding a job at graduation by involving you in real-world planning projects; by encouraging or requiring you to do a planning internship as part of your education; they might suggest summer and/or part-time jobs providing similar opportunities which will also help build your resume. These activities show you how different kinds of planners actually do their jobs, as well as give you the opportunity to interact with practicing planners who might offer you a job when you graduate. In fact, many planning internships turn into full-time jobs after graduation.

You can lay the groundwork for a successful job search long before you graduate. If you attend local and state or provincial meetings of the American Planning Association (APA) or the Canadian Institute of Planners (CIP) you will meet professional planners involved in a variety of projects—and learn about current and future job openings. It’s a great idea to join APA or CIP as a student because you get all the benefits of membership at a low student fee.

As an APA member you will receive professional publications like Planning, have opportunities to present your work at conferences, meet a mentor and obtain career guidance. Student Membership also enables you to network with frontline planners. In addition, APA offers Jobs Online, an extensive database of jobs from internships to planning director.

HOW CAN I FIND OUT MORE ABOUT PLANNING?

There are many ways to determine if a career in planning is right for you. If your university sponsors a career day, practicing planners may well attend. Seek them out and ask what they do and what their focus is. Attend a local meeting of the American Planning Association (APA) or Canadian Institute of Planners (CIP). Introduce yourself to some of the planners present and discuss their jobs and responsibilities; question the kind of issues they tackle. Find out if a planning job would allow you to achieve your personal goals.

You can also read about a host of planning issues and how planners are addressing them in Planning, the magazine published by the American Planning Association (APA). Canadian students will find Plan Canada, the magazine published by the Canadian Institute of Planners (CIP), to be equally useful.

Find out more directly from students currently obtaining planning degrees who are involved in such planning student organizations (PSO) through the American Planning Association and CAPS, the Canadian Association of Planning Students, which hosts annual conferences for planning students.

To briefly get an idea of the depth of important topics related to planning, scan the index in the back of this Guide! In Index A, Faculty Interests, interests have been sorted into groups and alphabetically - both because the line between subfields aren’t always clear, and because faculty describe themselves and their interests differently. Some faculty interests will obviously overlap with your own – for example if your interest is “neighborhood planning” you’ll find that is a popular topic. But you may also share interest with those who declare “housing and community development,” “housing,” “community planning,” or “neighborhood planning.” Another example is “environmental planning” which can also be described as “ecology,” “sustainability,” “conservation,” or “smart growth.”

To more thoroughly research different kinds of jobs you can obtain with a planning degree, and to explore in greater depth a variety of important planning topics, find the latest edition of Local Planning: Contemporary Principles & Practice edited by Gary Hack, et al. and published by the International City Management Association (ICMA). An excerpt from the web description says this book “focuses on emerging issues and future challenges, offering useful, current examples of leading planning practices. The organization and content of the book will help planners and non-planners who manage the work of planners apply well-reasoned strategic thinking to their planning challenges, and will help students of the profession bridge theory and practice.” This book is a collection of chapters from nearly 100 local, regional and national practicing professionals.

A PLANNER’S EDUCATION

What kind of an education should a planner have? Today most people need a professional Masters Degree in Planning to get the best planning jobs, although a Bachelors degree (BA or BS) can provide an entry into the profession. Universities offering both Bachelors and Graduate degrees are profiled in this Guide. People commonly enter Masters programs in planning with many different kinds of Bachelor’s degrees; it is not necessary to have a BA/BS in Planning to do graduate work in planning. Some planners are educated first in the social sciences like public administration, sociology, economics, geography, or government; others are trained first in the design professions like architecture, urban design, and landscape architecture. Still others have their undergraduate degree in professions such as public health, social work, nursing, or engineering. Many people with undergraduate degrees in the Arts or Humanities (English, Art, History) also choose to pursue a graduate planning degree.

Some people use the new skills they acquire in graduate school to expand the emphasis of their undergraduate degree while others develop new approaches. For example, those with economics training may become economic development planners while those with degrees in biology or chemistry may choose to become environmental planners. But it is not unusual for someone trained at the undergraduate level as an architect to become a social policy planner or for someone with a BS in nursing to become a housing planner!

There are many universities where you can gain the education and professional training you need to become a planner. Today there are hundreds of planning programs or planning departments that are members of the Association of Collegiate Schools of Planning (ACSP) or of the Association of Canadian University Planning Programs (ACUPP).

THINGS TO CONSIDER WHEN CHOOSING THE BEST PLANNING PROGRAM FOR YOU

To determine the planning program that will best provide you with the education and training you want, decide which issues you would like to highlight in your educational program and the professional specialization you think you might want to follow. Then look at the programs listed in this Guide to see which ones stress the specializations where your strongest interests lie. You may be interested in the background of the other students in the program; for example, if you would like to work or study for awhile in another country you might be interested in a school that has a fair number of international students or faculty with comparative research interests. You might prefer to be part of a small, intimate program rather than a large one. If you are interested in research or think that you might want to go on for a PhD in Planning, which would allow you to teach at a university, you might want to consider those programs that offer both Masters and Doctoral degrees. If you are interested in learning through hands-on experiences, by linking through to their individual websites try to identify programs offering a large number of project courses or requiring a professional project (or “capstone”) report instead of a thesis to graduate. Perhaps you have an interest in another subject related to planning, like public health or law, so look for programs with dual degrees in planning and these other fields. And of course, you have to consider financial and other practical details—scholarships and grants, and the total cost of education, etc.

The Guide is set up to help you quickly evaluate a large number of planning programs by comparing the major factors likely to be of most interest to students: the type of students in the program, the background and specializations of the faculty, the costs of attending, and the possibility of financial assistance. But the brief entries in the Guide can only help you narrow down your choices. Make sure to link through to schools of interest to gather more detail.

Once you have identified a number of programs that might meet your needs, we strongly suggest you contact them directly. Start by visiting their websites; then contact the chair of the program or individual faculty who work in the areas in which you have an interest.

Students often ask: “What’s the best school for...” this or that specialization. There is no one answer. The Association of Collegiate Schools of Planning does not rank schools because every planning program in the Guide has its own strengths and resources. There is simply no effective way to say that one school offers a better degree than another. Planning students bring their own goals, background, and experiences to their educational career—so different individuals will get very different things from any individual planning program. Only you can decide the best school for your needs, interests and resources.
WHAT IS AN ACCREDITED PLANNING PROGRAM?

Consider attending a planning program accredited by either the Planning Accreditation Board (PAB) in the U.S., or the Canadian Institute of Planners (CIP) in Canada. These organizations review Master's or Bachelor's planning programs to assure prospective students, employers, and the public that the education and training they provide measure up to the profession's standards. These standards are cooperatively developed by practicing planners and planning academicians. Sometimes attending an accredited school can make a difference in your career.

Not all accredited schools teach the same courses or emphasize the same subjects—in fact, the differences between the schools appeal to different student interests. But the curriculum at all accredited schools will provide you with a core set of theories, methods, and techniques which properly prepare you for a career as a practicing planner. Graduating from an accredited program will make you more attractive to agencies or firms hiring planners. In addition, you will be able to join the American Institute of Certified Planners (AICP) sooner after leaving school if you attend an accredited school. Being a certified planner can advance your professional career.

While all accredited planning programs cover the same set of core materials and techniques, they do so in different ways. Planning programs vary greatly in the issues they emphasize, the research they foster, and the professional projects in which they engage. As a result, programs may differ markedly in the kinds of topics to which you will be exposed, the other students with whom you attend class, and the kind of educational experience you will have.

For example, planning programs located near the ocean may offer a concentration in coastal resource planning; programs located in farm states may focus on rural and small urban planning issues; those along the Mexican or Canadian border may stress comparative planning. Of course, other planning programs may offer these same concentrations in response to the backgrounds and research interests of their faculty. Individual programs also vary in the extent to which they emphasize practice in studios and workshops or in the degree to which they expose students to research and policy analysis. Some programs have established international ties; others have long worked with local communities to provide students with practical experience.

In 2013, 84 degrees in planning from 74 U.S. universities were accredited by the PAB. Sixteen Canadian schools offer accredited degrees. Some Canadian schools are accredited by both organizations. Most of these programs are described in detail in the body of this Guide.

This Guide also contains listings for universities outside North America. These programs may be very interesting to you, however, programs outside of North America are not eligible for either PAB or CIP accreditation.

The PAB does not evaluate PhD programs for accreditation because the primary focus of the doctoral degree is usually not professional practice. However, the CIP does evaluate Canadian PhD programs for accreditation.

TIPS FOR UNDERSTANDING THIS GUIDE

• Schools are sorted alphabetically: Arizona State University near the beginning of the Guide - the University of Arizona closer to the end.

• In the top right corner of the page, there will be icons indicating each degree offered by the university. If the icon has the letters PAB or CIP underneath the degree acronym, that particular degree is accredited by the Planning Accreditation Board or the Canadian Institute of Planners.

• The degree acronyms are: BA/BS for a Bachelor of the Arts or a Bachelor of Science; MA/MS for Masters of the Arts or Masters of Science; and PhD for a doctoral degree. Remember, the PAB does not accredit doctoral degree programs.

• All links in the Guide are live links for your convenience. When you have questions we strongly suggest using the links through to the school’s web site or use the email addresses directly to faculty in that school or department.

• The left-hand column begins the general information about the program: admission requirements, deadlines for application, availability of financial assistance, application fees, tuition rates, etc.

- The Guide next describes each of the degrees offered by the university. In general, the text tells if the program or degree is: accredited, how old it is, and the total number of degrees granted over the last few years. It shows substantive specializations available for each degree, prerequisites necessary to get into the program, how many units or hours needed to obtain the degree in question (breaking those totals down into required (core) courses, restricted (specialization) and unrestricted electives), and the final product required — such as a thesis, an essay or professional report, or a capstone project.

- The Guide contains two separate entries for faculty. The text describing Planning Faculty includes those people who spend at least half their time teaching in one or more of the listed planning programs. The second set of faculty descriptions, Other Affiliated Faculty, includes those who teach in other university programs - like engineering, geography, or social work - for the majority of their time or those who are practicing professionals who teach occasionally or part-time in the university’s planning program. Sometimes this category includes retired (emeriti) professors or university administrators who teach planning courses occasionally.

- If the faculty member has taken a professional certification exam through the American Institute of Certified Planners, the icon AICP will appear with his/her name. This generally indicates that the faculty member is very interested in professional planning practice. The icon FAICP means the faculty member has been named a Fellow of the AICP, a very prestigious honor for a professional planner.

- The first words in italics below a faculty member’s name indicate his/her title, which in many cases indicates rank and seniority. The most senior (in U.S. schools) are professors followed by associate and then assistant professors. If someone is listed as visiting or adjunct it generally means that s/he is not a permanent member of the faculty. If someone is listed as emeritus it means that s/he has retired—retired professors vary greatly in the number of courses they teach.

- The faculty entries also give you a very brief idea of the person’s credentials and particular interests or areas of study (listed as specializations). These give you a snapshot of the teaching, research, and professional or service activities of the faculty with whom you might be studying. While most planning professors have a PhD, not all do, particularly if they are or have been active practitioners.

- At the end of the listing, most schools have charts with data about student enrollment and student composition. The charts give you an idea of the number and diversity of the students in each planning degree program the university offers.

OTHER INFORMATION

The Ball State Bachelor of Urban Planning and Development is among only 15 accredited undergraduate programs in North America, and its graduate program is the only such program in Indiana. Our undergraduate program and the core of our traditional masters program are offered in Muncie.

We are part of the nationally recognized College of Architecture & Planning, and housed within a state-of-the-art building amidst a bucolic, 750-acre main campus in Muncie, and a satellite campus in the heart of Indianapolis. Muncie is a city of 65,000 with a low cost of living and an easy lifestyle, enriched by a growing creative class and a large number of arts programs both at the university and in the community. Some courses in the accelerated track graduate program are offered in the Ball State Indianapolis facility, located just south of Monument Circle in the heart of the city.

These Values Constitute our Program Orientation

Immersive Learning. Our program has established a tradition of a hands-on approach to professional education, a tradition that has become a model for Ball State’s comprehensive commitment to immersive learning. In our studio classes, students apply their classroom learning to real-world problems, working in teams with real-world stakeholders.

Experiential Learning – In addition to the immersive experiences offered in many studios, students apply their learning to real issues, using real sites and real data, in other selected classes, in co-curricular community charrettes, and, at the student’s option, in many of the capstone student projects.

Physical Context – Every student will learn to analyze and understand the physical context in which planning takes place and to participate in the making of physical plans. Courses dealing with community development, economic development and social issues all acknowledge the physical world in which those planning issues are addressed.

Sustainability – Our curriculum and our courses recognize that healthy communities are socially, economically and ecologically sustainable ones.

Plan Implementation – Simply, plans in the public interest are made useful if they are implemented. Students learn about the political, practical, legal and economic aspects of plan implementation, working with full-time and adjunct faculty members who have direct experience in that field.

Learning Community – We are a faculty of teachers first. Our missions in research and service to our external constituencies of profession and the general community are not neglected, but those are subordinate to the obligations we have to our students. This collegiality and attention is nurtured and maintained as our hallmark.

Undergrads are admitted from our common first-year program.
BACHELOR’S DEGREE

Freshmen in the College of Architecture and Planning take a common first-year program in visual communications and design before officially choosing a major in planning, architecture, or landscape architecture. The bachelor’s degree in urban planning and development requires a minimum of 120 credit hours, including courses in history and theory, land use and land development, planning law, as well as several studio courses and a required internship.

Admission information is available at bsu.edu/cap. Be sure to indicate your interest in planning when you apply.

MASTER’S DEGREE

Students in our master’s program come from a wide array of undergraduate disciplines, including sociology, geography, journalism, communications, political science, and psychology. Graduates of any PAB-accredited planning program can earn a master’s degree in just 36 hours through our fast-track program. Strong community partners provide graduate assistantships each year.

Contact Christine Rhine at crhine@bsu.edu for information about a master’s degree in urban planning.

The Department prides itself on the fact that it was established after a request to the University from the Boise Metro Chamber of Commerce in 2005. This has given us the unique obligation and opportunity to meet the needs for planning as they were identified by the local community. Continued growth and changes in the demographic composition of communities in Idaho has posed unique planning challenges that can be described as a balancing act between responding to rapidly changing social needs and aspirations on one hand and the maintenance and respect for long standing community ideals and cultural ecologies on the other.

The Department provides students, professional planners, community leaders and elected officials in the State of Idaho and the Inner Mountain West with the tools and insights necessary to address the planning issues of the future. We specifically focus on the planning issues that are faced by small and midsized cities of the West. While the issues are not unique to these places, the context and characteristics of the “West” call for planning strategies that take advantage of unique opportunities and challenges.

We try to do this through an innovative curriculum, which is organized around four combinations of core courses with the instructors of the courses working together on streamlining the experience of students that are taking the courses. The underlying thought behind the design is that there are theoretical and more applied courses within the curriculum that can support each other and improve student learning if they are taught in the same semester with deliberate feedback between the two courses. In addition, the two courses work on an applied research project, leading to a joint presentation and report at the end of the semester. The curriculum also includes an “integration” course, in which student reflect on a variety of general issues that practicing planners need to be able to address such as, professional ethics, issues of social justice, data and research limitations, leadership and professionalism.

(Total Number of students in both MCP & MUA)

Boston University’s graduate degree programs in urban affairs (MUA) and city planning (MCP) offer a breadth of courses that individually and collectively challenge students to see not only cities, but also their own role as planners, policy makers, and social advocates—current or future—in a critical and thoughtful light. Students are asked to consider the political, social, and technical implications of each facet of planning and policy making, and thus to grapple with the fact that there are few, if any, simple solutions or approaches to urban issues.

We match the breadth and substance of our courses with a program that is unparalleled in its flexibility. BU students can pursue their MCP or MUA studies full-time or part-time, depending on their schedules or professional and personal commitments. Students can start their MCP or MUA by taking anywhere from one to five courses per semester.

The flexibility and accessibility of BU’s MCP and MUA programs helps to eliminate many of the barriers to graduate education that might discourage people from pursuing a distinguished graduate education in planning and urban affairs. As a result, our student body is truly diverse—and this translates into a dynamic and exciting classroom experience.

The City and Regional Planning (CRP) department at Cal Poly SLO has awarded over 1,265 degrees at the Bachelors and Masters levels since 1968. Our strengths include physical land use planning, environmental planning, urban design, community sustainability and climate adaptation planning.

We are part of the nationally recognized College of Architecture and Environmental Design - the largest college of its kind in California. CRP students can take courses offered by others disciplines in the college including Architecture and Landscape Architecture, and engage in research in the Planning, Design and Construction Institute. Minors are offered in: Real property development, sustainable environments, and construction management.

Benefitting from the “learn by doing model” students acquire strong professional skills and an understanding of the planning process as they develop community plans for city clients. Internships in a planning agency, private firm or non-profit organization and our well-earned reputation for delivering an excellent professional education provide students real-world experience and, a head start on finding a job after graduation. CRP graduates have become planning directors of major US cities and principals in highly acclaimed private firms.

The masters program ranks #1 nationally for institutions without a Ph.D. program (2012 Planetizen Guide to Graduate Planning Education). The City and Regional Planning Department is recognized for its educational excellence and student achievements including winning awards such as the American Institute for Certified Planners (AICP) student project, the American Planning Association (APA) awards for best paper in transportation planning, APA award for outstanding leadership by a student planner, the Bank of America Affordable Housing Challenge and many California state awards for community plans.

CRP faculty balance professional experience and academic preparation and are exceptional instructors. They are involved in research and practice in environmental planning, sustainability, urban design, plan implementation, international planning, geographic information systems, community development, climate change, disaster mitigation planning, form based codes, transportation and the land use development process.

- Nationally accredited, professionally-oriented master’s and bachelor’s degrees.
- Among the best planning programs in the nation (Planetizen, 2012).
- Community outreach and hands-on education.
- National, state, and local student project awards.

- International exchanges; study abroad opportunities.
- All faculty with professional planning experience.
- Highly successful job placement at great salaries.
- San Luis Obispo, on the beautiful California Central Coast, was voted “happiest town” in the US!

OTHER INFORMATION

The mission of the Department of Urban Studies and Planning is to prepare students, at both the undergraduate and graduate level, for professional careers in urban studies and planning. In addition, the department seeks to provide a broad based educational experience, set in the context of the social sciences, which contributes to the development of informed and thoughtful individuals prepared to contribute to the society at large. Department faculty supports the mission through teaching, research and publication, community outreach and action, and university service.

OTHER INFORMATION

In August 2008, the School of Architecture and Planning (CUArch) launched a new Master of City and Regional Planning Program (M.C.R.P.) which builds on its 100-year tradition of design education. The M.C.R.P. is a post-professional degree which prepares students with the foundation to become generalist planners according to the CUArch mission. The M.C.R.P. program has attracted professionals and recent graduates practicing in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area who seek training as an urban planner. While planning is a discipline that has a physical/design dimension, it is also a field that considers other aspects of the human environment particularly those that are social, cultural, economic, and political. The M.C.R.P. program at CUA takes the stance that all of these aspects are integral to improving quality of life and to planning for the future of our communities. Accordingly, the program links design with policy to address broader issues of sustainability and stewardship. The Washington, D.C., metropolitan area provides an excellent laboratory to explore these issues in urban, suburban, and exurban locations. The M.C.R.P. program is closely aligned with the Master of Science in Sustainable Design program to reinforce sustainable design principles in the planning curriculum.

The Graduate Program in City and Regional Planning at Clemson University is the only graduate planning program in South Carolina. While the curriculum covers theory and policy issues, the principal focus is on the applied skills that students will need to enter the job market as professional planners and to evolve as leaders in the field. Classes use real-world situations for analysis and for the application of planning skills. The program is accredited by the Planning Accreditation Board.

OTHER INFORMATION

Columbia University's official name is "Columbia University in the City of New York", and what better place to study urban planning and development. Our location in the New York City region means access to a multitude of fieldwork, internship, and lecture opportunities as well as exposure to a wide range of planning issues from mega-projects, strategic rezoning, street calming programs, and urban agriculture to affordable housing initiatives, neighborhood retail revitalization schemes, and urban park development. Moreover, at GSAPP you will be exposed to numerous global projects ranging from housing development in Seoul to facility planning in Amman as well as visiting scholars from around the world lecturing on planning and architecture.

The Master of Science degree in Urban Planning Program offers both a core curriculum to anchor the student's understanding of urban planning and also a variety of elective courses on sustainable zoning, mass transit, negotiation, presentation skills, neighborhood development, international planning, redevelopment policy, and many others that will develop specialized knowledge in the field. We also provide a major studio experience as well as an opportunity to explore a topic in depth through our year-long thesis course. Seven full-time faculty plus approximately twenty adjuncts from the region's professional community support this extensive curriculum. Located within a multi-disciplinary design-based school, the Urban Planning Program has strong ties to the architecture, historic preservation and real estate development programs here, through joint lectures, shared classes, and the mingling of students committed to their individual fields but sharing Avery Hall and their passion for the improving the world through the design and use of the places we inhabit.

The School of Urban and Regional Planning is a locus of scholars, teachers, practitioners, agents and students committed to the continuous improvement of urban regions and the planning enterprise through research, teaching and service.

The School provides an environment to discuss, develop and disseminate new ideas and concepts, and contribute to the practice of planning directed towards a future that is environmentally, economically and humanly beneficial. The focus of our work relies on the recognition and use of multi-scalar connections and interactions of systems and planning activities including policy framework development, participatory decision-making and community stewardship. The School seeks to exploit the potential of emerging technologies and collaborative engagement in creative and innovative ways.

Current initiatives include global urban network’s climate change, metropolitan form, disaster management, place making, healthy cities and housing market issues.

OTHER INFORMATION

FSU DURP is the oldest accredited planning program in the State of Florida and since 1965 has graduated more than 1,300 students with Masters and Ph.D.s in urban and regional planning. As such, FSU DURP is one of the largest producers of planners in the nation. FSU DURP's faculty are dedicated to preparing their Masters and Ph.D. students for careers as leaders in planning practice and university teaching and research.

The program has five joint degree programs with Demography, International Affairs, Law, Public Administration, and Public Health and advanced studies in Real Estate, Urban Design, and Collaboration and Dispute Resolution that reflect interest from students for training in specific areas in demand by employers. These joint degrees and advanced studies build upon DURP’s connections to other campus units, including the Center for Demography and Population Health and the College of Business.

85-100 percent of FSU DURP’s Master’s students obtain planning positions within a few months of graduation and recent Ph.D. graduates have obtained planning school teaching positions at the University of Iowa, Kansas State University, Oklahoma University, University of Minnesota, University of Toledo, University of Hawaii, Griffith University Australia, and Queensland University of Technology Australia.

Graduates of both programs are now employed in 49 states and over 40 foreign nations as professional staff in private consulting firms, development companies, law firms, universities, research organizations, and in local, state, regional, and national offices. FSU DURP endeavors to attract a large and diverse set of students to urban planning. In recent years, approximately half of the incoming graduate students have received financial aid generated by the Department. Much of this aid comes from sources external to Florida State such as grants, contracts, and gifts.

MASTER’S DEGREE

Urban and Regional Planning

Acquire the professional knowledge and leadership skills needed to shape the sustainable and inclusive communities of tomorrow.

About the program

The Georgetown University Master of Professional Studies in Urban and Regional Planning program trains visionary leaders who integrate urban design with community development to create more livable neighborhoods, cities and regions. The program’s applied curriculum covers the range of urban planning expertise including economic development, land use, urban form, housing, culture, transportation, energy and environment. Housed in a state-of-the-art campus in downtown Washington, D.C., the professionals, communities and places of the National Capital Region serve as our urban laboratory for exploring the process of urbanization as a global phenomenon.

Become an expert and a leader in addressing some of the most important challenges facing urban communities around the world:
• Collaborate with stakeholders and engage citizens in an ethical manner
• Align economic development with community and cultural development
• Facilitate responsible urban investment through land use planning and design
• Plan for a full-spectrum of housing choices
• Enable social inclusion through land use and transportation policies
• Protect natural resources through high-performing urban systems

Features of the Program

• A graduate-level master's degree from the oldest university in Washington, DC and the oldest Jesuit university in the nation.
• Exposure to the full range of professional planning practices associated with regulatory frameworks, public finance and the urban development process.
• Located in the state-of-the-art Georgetown Downtown campus, where local neighborhoods and the entire National Capital Region serve as our urban laboratory.
• Engagement with leading urban planning practitioners who represent professional excellence from local, regional and international research and development organizations.

• The opportunity for full-time students to integrate internship or employment experiences while earning degree-oriented course credits.

Curriculum

Our curriculum has been developed in collaboration with the American Institute of Certified Planner’s Planning Accreditation Board (PAB) and provides students with a balance of urban planning history, theory and practice. The degree requires 42 credits to complete. Classes are held in the evenings to enable complementary professional development. An emphasis on immersion and student-directed study is reinforced through place-based research opportunities, which are both local and international. Students pursuing the degree on a full-time basis may finish within in 15 months, alternatively, part-time pursuit of the degree is equally encouraged and typically completed within three years.

Required Core Courses (18 credits)

• Methods in Urban Planning
• Economics for Planners
• Legal Foundations of Planning
• Planning the Sustainable Future
• Urban Planning History & Theory
• Ethics and Planning Practice

Concentrations (12 credits)

Students will be required to take four courses which represent a concentration in:
• Urban Design and Land Use
• Housing, Community and Economic Development
• Student-designed Concentration

Electives (9 credits)

• A variety of elective seminars, independent research projects, and professional internships.

Required Masters Thesis (3 credits)

• All students are required to research, write and defend a final masters thesis. This is student-driven, independent scholarly work, which culminates the granting of a masters degree from Georgetown University.

Who Should Apply?

• Professionals who currently work in the urban planning, design and development fields who seek advanced studies to achieve their professional goals.
• Students who are passionate about the process of urbanization and the place-based and community-based strategies to help shape comprehensive solutions.
• Individuals who seek the professional knowledge and leadership skills to guide the growth of neighborhoods, cities and metropolitan regions.

OTHER INFORMATION

Georgia Tech's SCaRP is a global leader in the creation of sustainable cities and regions aiming for the highest levels of international learning and professional engagement. A research-led and highly interdisciplinary community of scholars, the School faculty includes six Fellows of the American Institute of Certified Planners, editors of Journal of Planning Education and Research, and former chief operating officers of the Atlanta Regional Commission, the Georgia Regional Transportation Authority, and the Atlanta City Planning Department. They are responsible for an average of over $2 million per year of externally funded research, serve on 15 editorial boards, and are widely sought as framers of and advisors to local, state, federal and international human settlements policy, research foundations, private developers and learned societies.

Graduate Students come to this school from across the U.S. and around the world. These students arrive with ambitions to solve the world’s most vexing problems resulting from population growth, economic disparities, resource shortages and climate change and after graduation become leaders in the city planning profession, the development industry, the non-profit sector and academia. Our 1400 graduates, including many of Atlanta’s and Georgia’s top planners and policy makers, work in 49 U.S. states and territories and 31 foreign countries.

Our institutional setting enables students to acquire expertise in every area of the urban development process. The Center for Quality Growth and Regional Development and the Center for GIS provide research opportunities and financial support to many of our students and establish critical linkages between the Program and the larger regional community. Planning students work with other centers and institutes across the Tech campus. Tech’s award winning Co-op program matches planning students with a long list of forward-looking and respected city planning firms and agencies in the Atlanta metropolitan area. Georgia Tech consistently ranks among U.S. News’ top 10 public universities. Atlanta is the fifth largest concentration of higher education activity in the United States and among its most diverse and rapidly growing metropolitan areas.

Financial Aid Information
Need based aid for US Citizens, US Permanent Residents, with limited funding available for International Students. In 2013-2014, 100% of MUP students received some form of financial aid. MUPs received over $2.7 million in total including $1.1 million in loans and the rest in other forms such as grants, fellowships, work study, and assistantships. Harvard provides such grants to international students as well as U.S. students, though funds available for international students are more limited. In addition, MUPs can take advantage of a number of other fellowships, work study allocations, and student assistant jobs both for semester and summer activities.

Harvard’s Master in Urban Planning (MUP) degree program teaches students how to plan for the development, preservation, and enhancement of a productive, sustainable, and equitable built environment. Students are taught to understand, analyze, and influence the variety of forces – social, economic, political, legal, historical, ecological, cultural, and aesthetic, among others – shaping the built environment. Students learn to understand these forces through deep immersion in the histories and theories of urban planning and urbanism as profession and phenomenon, to analyze these forces through intelligent application of qualitative, quantitative, and visual techniques, and to influence these forces through technical facility and creative interventions involving laws, institutions, the economy, politics, and design.

OTHER INFORMATION

Future home of Urban and Regional Planning Department (Fall 2014)

The Department of Urban and Regional Planning seeks to produce leaders in the field of city planning. The program will provide students with learning opportunities that will enable them to develop the intellectual qualities necessary for meeting the broad and varied range of problems and challenges associated with urban growth and development. Practical community-based learning experiences and planning studios are an important part of the curriculum. The program has a special focus to increase the number of under-represented groups and women in the profession. Students have the opportunity to participate in internship opportunities in the public, private, and non-profit sectors. The program is designed for both full-time and part-time students.

OTHER INFORMATION

Since its founding 80 years ago, the Department of Urban Studies and Planning at Massachusetts Institute of Technology has been consistently rated the top planning school in the world. We are home to the largest urban planning faculty in the United States and enjoy the advantage of operating within the context of Massachusetts Institute of Technology’s culture of innovation and interdisciplinary knowledge creation.

We see as our mission to educate students while advancing theory and practice in areas of scholarship that will best serve the nation and the world in the twenty-first century. We are committed to generating and disseminating knowledge, and to working with communities, governments, and industry to bring this knowledge to bear on the world’s most pressing challenges. We provide our students with an education that combines rigorous academic study and the excitement of discovery with active engagement in the practice of place-making.

Our goal is to apply advanced analysis and design to understand and solve pressing urban and environmental problems. To this end, the department fosters a culture of learning by doing, while also supporting the development of influential theories in the areas of urban planning and design, economic development, and environmental policymaking. By complementing more traditional seminars with studios, workshops, and practica, our faculty, students, and researchers are able to translate path-breaking ideas into practical and enduring solutions.

Through this process of translating ideas into action, Massachusetts Institute of Technology’s urban planning faculty, students, and researchers are having a profound impact on urban development worldwide. We are identifying the underlying trends, patterns, and systemic features of contemporary cities and their environments. And we are planning for the future in ways that will enhance the built environment while nurturing its supporting systems.

OTHER INFORMATION

Montreal is a cosmopolitan city with roots in both French and English culture. It has five universities and many colleges, a downtown that is active 24/7, attractive and safe neighborhoods, and plenty of recreational opportunities. It is an exceptional laboratory for urban studies and planning, and the School is well integrated in the local planning world. Master’s students, who have varied disciplinary and ethnic/cultural backgrounds, participate in local planning through studio courses and individual initiatives. The School also welcomes doctoral students (Ad-Hoc Ph.D. in Urban Policy, Planning and Design) as well as visiting professors and foreign researchers. Professors and students are very active in international research, in particular in India, the Middle East, Southern Africa, Central America and the Caribbean.

The Master’s program is accredited by the Ordre des urbanistes du Québec and the Canadian Institute of Planners, the MUP degree is recognized as an equivalent degree for professional accreditation in the US and other countries.

OTHER INFORMATION

The MSU Planning Program, founded in 1946, has the oldest urban planning undergraduate degree program in the nation. Graduates of the Bachelor’s and Master’s degree programs are scattered throughout the U.S., offering a large network of alumni and potential job contacts. Through Urban Collaborators, which is the outreach unit located within the Program, students carry out real-world planning research for a range of small towns and cities throughout Michigan, including Detroit, Lansing, Flint, Grand Rapids, and Pontiac. Good ties with area state government and local planning agencies lead to a number of excellent internship placements for students.

The MSU Planning Program, founded in 1946, has the oldest urban planning undergraduate degree program in the nation. Graduates of the Bachelor’s and Master’s degree programs are scattered throughout the U.S., offering a large network of alumni and potential job contacts. Through Urban Collaborators, which is the outreach unit located within the Program, students carry out real-world planning research for a range of small towns and cities throughout Michigan, including Detroit, Lansing, Flint, Grand Rapids, and Pontiac. Good ties with area state government and local planning agencies lead to a number of excellent internship placements for students.

The Programs for Sustainable Planning & Development (PSPD) is an alliance of four programs with a shared value placed on urban sustainability—defined by the “triple bottom line” of environment, equity, and economy.

The 4 graduate Master of Science programs are:

- City & Regional Planning
- Urban Environmental Systems Management
- Facilities Management
- Historic Preservation

Each of the 4 graduate programs maintains its independence, degree, and depth of study. Yet with the advice of Coordinators and Chairs, students can move between the four programs, with the further option to follow set tracks for specialized or multifaceted studies. Studios bring together students from all four graduate programs for interdisciplinary teamwork.

PSPD offers linkages to the undergraduate Construction Management Program, with the opportunity to focus on real estate development; Brooklyn Law School, with opportunity for a joint Masters / Juris Doctor; and to a number of Pratt and civic partners, with opportunity to combine study and advocacy, action with reflection. These include the Pratt Center for Community Development, the Institute’s new technology and GIS center – SAVI, the NYC Environmental Justice Alliance, among others.

The primary mission of the PSPD is to provide a professionally oriented education to a student body with diverse cultural, educational and professional backgrounds. The PSPD welcomes applicants with undergraduate degrees in a wide range of academic disciplines. In the application process, the PSPD values creativity, civic engagement and depth of experience, as well as intellectual capacity.

URBANISM In this century as in the last, the major human force on our planet is migration to metropolitan areas; while the major challenge of the present and future is addressing climate change. Prior city planning values of aesthetics [as per the City Beautiful movement of the late 19th century] and new technology [as per the City Efficient movement of the mid 20th century] must now be augmented with a new city sustainable movement. The PSPD is especially committed to realizing this paradigm on the community as well as the citywide basis.

SOCIAL EQUITY & ECONOMIC VIABILITY True sustainability considers factors such as social justice and financial realities. Advocacy and participatory planning are core principles, further propelled by the Livable Cities and the Environmental Justice movements. Sustainability is not just a new set of technologies and standards; it is also a value system.

PROFESSIONALISM & INTERNSHIPS Relevant employment and internships are an important component of the PSPD’s educational approach. Students entering with work experience in a relevant field may earn credits through work experience/portfolio credit. Unpaid and paid internships are available, as is the opportunity to receive course credit for internships while in the program. The resulting variety of professional experiences enriches seminar discussions and studio teamwork, provides students with a wealth of contacts in the field, and strengthens their job qualifications.

OTHER INFORMATION

ENVIRONMENTAL PLANNING
Planning Statement of Purpose:
Rutgers offers an Environmental Planning Option as part of its BS in Environmental Planning and Design at the School of Environmental and Biological Sciences. The other options within the major are environmental geomatics, landscape architecture and landscape industry. Environmental planning requires the integration of environmental information into the planning process and is concerned with the protection and enhancement of environmental systems while addressing demands for human population growth and land development. This option is intended for students who are interested in pursuing professional careers in environmental planning and related areas. It also provides a basis for graduate and professional studies. An environmental planning certificate program also is available for undergraduate students in other programs of study.

With its tremendous density and diversity—of environment, communities, transportation, and infrastructure—New Jersey is now and future America in microcosm, the ideal proving ground for new ideas. Rutgers University and the Bloustein School have always been its trusted partners in moving forward.

Master of City and Regional Planning
Ph.D. in Urban Planning and Public Policy

Concentrations in Environmental & Physical Planning, Housing & Real Estate, International Development & Regional Planning, Transportation Policy & Planning, and Urban & Community Development

For additional information or to visit the campus, please contact (848) 932-4008 or email recruit@policy.rutgers.edu

The extensive studio work that we were required to complete, as well as the experience of giving formal presentations to studio clients, really provided that extra edge. The Bloustein School also offers excellent career connections and credentials to students seeking to advance their career not only in the New York–New Jersey metropolitan area, but also nationwide.

OTHER INFORMATION

Master’s Degree in Urban Planning & Development

The Master of Science in Urban Planning and Development, offered by Saint Louis University’s Center for Sustainability, is the only degree of its kind at a Jesuit institution and the only masters in planning within the state of Missouri. The mission of the program is to provide a center for education, community dialogue and research to support urban growth and revitalization, both in the St. Louis region and around the globe.

The Center for Sustainability has access to many resources and faculty experts whose knowledge enriches the planning program. The program is interdisciplinary in cooperation with SLU’s John Cook School of Business and School of Law. Its intimate classes emphasize skill building, discussion and debate.

This degree enables graduates to understand the complex world of urban development from both the public and private sectors, and develops professional competencies in planning technology, real estate finance and analysis, and communication across diverse audiences.

Program Design

The program is a 48 credit hour Master of Science degree that can be completed in two years full-time, including the summer session. A part-time option is available, requiring a minimum participation of six credit hours per semester. Part-time students complete the degree in 3.5 years. Specializations include community development, economic development, GIS, real estate development and environmental planning.

Required courses include: Planning and Development Theory, Urban and Regional Theory, Local Economic Development Policy and Practice, Planning Studio, Infrastructure Planning and Processes, Land Use Planning and Analysis, Land Use Control, Real Estate Finance, Capstone/Project, Internship.

Using world-renowned Silicon Valley as a laboratory, the Urban and Regional Planning Department at San José State University (SJSU) is a leading center in professional urban and regional planning graduate education. The university is located in downtown San José, the largest city in Northern California and the capital of Silicon Valley.

The department offers graduate study leading to the degree of Master of Urban Planning (MUP) as well as certificate programs. The programs train a diverse student population to become leaders in rapidly-changing urban environments, structuring the programs support to a diverse student population, including working students who attend the program on a part-time basis.

The program trains skilled professionals who graduate with a strong education in general planning practice and theory, as well as specialized training in planning sub-fields that include community design and development, transportation and land use planning, environmental planning, applications of technology in planning and real estate development. Graduates become familiar with cutting-edge planning concepts and applications that are evolving locally in the Silicon Valley and the larger San Francisco Bay Area.

Students and their work have been recognized at the regional, state and national levels by the American Planning Association and the American Institute of Certified Planners. Most notably, in 2009 and 2010 the American Planning Association single national award for a student planner went to SJSU MUP students.

Students take advantage of the department’s urban location by collaborating with local planning agencies and community-based organizations on public service projects that address topical local planning needs while also providing students with real-world professional experience. For example, the department participates actively in CommUniverCity San José, a community-university-city partnership that leads projects to advance the neighborhood improvement priorities set by local working class communities. Through CommUniverCity, MUP students have produced formal plans that city agencies and partner communities use to guide public policy and investment decisions.

About the Program
The Master of Science in Urban Studies and Planning program introduces students to a variety of issues facing urban areas through a multidisciplinary framework while building a firm theoretical and practical expertise in urban planning, urban politics, economic and community development, historic preservation, public management and urban fiscal. The Geographical Information System lab and engaged with faculty members who are respected scholars and leading practitioners in the field of urban studies. The classes are held in well-equipped classrooms in the Coastal Georgia Center. Small classes and a low student-faculty ratio ensure that the students receive a lot of individual attention from their instructors.

Texas A&M University’s programs in urban and regional planning offer perhaps the BEST VALUE in a planning education available in the United States. Low tuition and a low cost-of-living coupled with one of the most productive and active faculties in the nation means that students get a lot of bang for their buck. We offer a professional masters degree, dual degrees, and certificate programs, including our newly-launched e-Certificate in Transportation Planning, designed to allow professionals to further their careers in transportation planning, policy, and design from anywhere in the world.

The Aggie network is a powerful force. Students at Texas A&M are part of a culture of service and loyalty. Our planning student organization is one of the most engaged in the nation, actively participating in professional development, national conferences, and service opportunities. When they graduate, students join the Association of Former Students, the largest and most loyal alumni network in the world. Our graduates can be found on every populated continent, serving in high-ranking positions where decisions are made, as well as on the ground, working with residents to create more livable communities.

At Texas A&M, we believe in learning by doing. Through both research and teaching, faculty engage students in hands-on learning. Through our Texas Target Communities program, students work directly with low-capacity communities throughout their degree program. Specialized capstone courses allow students to apply learning to real-life problems. Our transportation students received the 2014 APA Student Project Award in Applied Research for their work designing a bike share program for our campus.

Faculty researchers do cutting-edge applied research, offering students the opportunity to become involved in sponsored research projects in real communities. Our Hazard Reduction & Recovery Center is one of only two United Nations (UN-OCHA) Collaborative Centers in the world. Projects like the Coastal Community Planning Atlas and Galveston’s Living Laboratory for Community Resilience give students tools for real-world planning.

The Texas A&M Transportation Institute is the largest transportation research center in the US, providing consulting services and research to cities, states, and nations. Our transportation faculty are leading researchers in active living, walkability, mobility, and sustainable transportation.

Curriculum and Core Values

UEP’s curriculum is built around a set of six core values:

- An appreciation of the inextricable linkages between social, economic and environmental issues and the ability to make policy and planning recommendations accordingly;
- An appreciation of the role of values in policy formation and planning and the ethical/social responsibility of policy and planning professionals to act accordingly;
- An appreciation of the deeply embedded nature of gender, age, race, class, disability, culture and sexual orientation in all aspects of public policy and planning;
- An appreciation of the centrality of spatial, social and environmental justice to all aspects of public policy and planning;
- An appreciation of the need to understand the role of individual and community rights and responsibilities in public policy and planning; and
- An appreciation of the need to move society toward the development of sustainable communities where there is a high quality of human life, delivered in a just and equitable manner while respecting the limits of supporting ecosystems.

Faculty and Students

UEP is a community of practice and scholars – public-spirited individuals committed to engaged processes and just outcomes for cities and communities. Our diverse faculty are active in research and engaged scholarship; many are leading scholars in their fields of expertise – just sustainability, environmental health and ethics, shrinking cities, housing and community development, child and family policy, international planning and urban policy, and Chinese urbanization, to name just a few.

Our more than 1,100 graduates comprise an extraordinary group of professionals, pursuing a wide variety of career paths. Alumni are currently serving in all levels of government in the U.S., as well as in numerous nonprofit organizations, citizen advocacy groups, international NGOs, and private firms. Many of our graduates have gone back to their home countries or have relocated overseas. UEP’s students are widely recognized for their technical expertise and their commitment to values that embrace equity, justice, and sustainability.

Community Strategy

Community partnership and engagement are an integral part of UEP’s teaching and research programs and one of our unique assets as a planning department. Students have opportunities to learn from and work with and in communities through the required Field Projects course (MA only), internships, and through a variety of elective courses and the visiting practitioner program. UEP’s mid-career MPP program recruits many students from the community practitioner field in Boston and beyond. UEP has long-standing deep relationships with government agencies, community development corporations, advocacy organizations, grassroots neighborhood groups, and human service agencies, especially in Massachusetts and the greater Boston area.

"UEP is all about the democratization of cities, of expanding opportunities and breaking down barriers between the lives we lead and the world we live in." (MA student, 2014)

Masters Degree

MSc in International Planning

Contact Person
Dr Jessica Ferm
+44 (0) 20 3108 5014
j.ferm@ucl.ac.uk

This program is accredited by the Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors (RICS) also accredited by the Royal Town Planning Institute (RTPI).

The MSc International Planning provides a strong international and comparative focus on planning and urban theory, and practice. It aims to provide students with a broad range of skills and knowledge in planning and urban theory in a global context, while offering them the opportunity to develop a specialisation. It provides an initial education in planning, with an international focus, and offers a mix of lecture- and seminar-based modules, project work, site visits and the preparation of a 10,000 words dissertation. The programme will help the student develop critical thinking, beyond regulatory considerations, and embraces wider social, economic, environmental and political concerns.

The international scope of the MSc primarily encompasses Europe, North America, Australia, South Africa and the Far East, and increasingly China and South-East Asia. Less emphasis is put on the urban development issues and planning systems of developing countries of the Global South (e.g. Africa and Latin America) as there is specific expertise and dedicated MSc programmes offered in the Development Planning Unit; another part of The Bartlett Faculty at UCL.

Masters Admission Requirements
- Minimum undergraduate GPA 3, (although 3.5 is preferred).
- Minimum GRE Not required

Masters Degree

MRes Inter-Disciplinary Urban Design

Contact Person
Prof Matthew Carmona
+44 (0)20 7679 4876
m.carmona@ucl.ac.uk

This programme is not accredited by either the RICS or the RTPI.

The MRes Inter-disciplinary Urban Design (IdUD) is a Faculty-wide one-year research degree. Through it students are able to tap into perhaps the largest concentration of urban design related researchers and professional expertise found anywhere in the world. The programme is designed to allow students to tailor their own learning to their background and future aspirations, through an unrivalled choice of ‘feeder’ courses combined with a major piece of individual research.

The MRes Inter-disciplinary Urban Design (IdUD) cuts across the existing post-graduate urban design, urbanism and related programmes from all parts of The Bartlett, and beyond, including from The Bartlett Schools of Architecture, Planning, and Graduate Studies, the Development Planning Unit, from the Department of Geography (Urban Studies) and from the UCL Centre for Transport Studies. It allows students to study in an Inter-disciplinary manner and in so doing to explore urban design as a critical arena for advanced research and practice.

This program is accredited by the Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors (RICS) also accredited by the Royal Town Planning Institute (RTPI) but only where it is taken as a specialist year following an RTPI accredited 3 year planning undergraduate degree.

Masters Admission Requirements
Minimum undergraduate GPA 3 (although 3.5 is preferred). Minimum GRE Not required

Masters Graduation Requirements
The program consists of 8 taught modules (each worth 15 credits) a dissertation (worth 60 credits). Students need to pass all taught modules and the dissertation a total of 180 credits in order to graduate. The taught modules include two specialization/optional modules.

The Bartlett School of Planning maintains a position as one of the premier planning schools in the UK and Europe and will be celebrating our centenary in 2014. Our unique location in the heart of central London, one of the world’s most dynamic and cosmopolitan cities, positions us at the forefront of policy-relevant critical debate, empirical urban study, and research-led teaching on the practices of shaping sustainable cities and regions. The very international and interdisciplinary staff profile and student body are evidence of the distinctive reputation of the School.

OTHER INFORMATION

The University of Arizona offers a Master of Science in Planning that prepares students through practice-based education to become the future leaders of the profession. The Program emphasizes systematic and creative ways to advance the practice of planning through the creation of methods, tools, and processes that solve problems associated with urbanization. Within this context, our central theme is the development of sustainable cities and regions around the world.

We define ourselves by the quality of our graduates who are: a) prepared for practice, and b) scholars of the discipline. The Program utilizes Tucson’s diverse cultures and environments as learning laboratories for applied research and relevant community engagement. Through community and industry partnerships, paired with faculty expertise, the Program is well equipped to provide hands-on learning opportunities that cultivate each student’s unique goals. Areas of focus can include Urban Design, Environmental Planning, Policy, Resource Conservation, GeoDesign, Transpiration, Health and Well-being, Social Justice, Cultural Heritage, and more.

The Program is located in Tucson, Arizona in the College of Architecture, Planning, and Landscape Architecture. Students and faculty work collaboratively within multidisciplinary real-world scenarios that integrate research with community outreach. Students have opportunities to participate in multi-disciplinary international studios as well as urban design studios that focus on shaping community identity and growth. We offer a dual degree MSP/MBA with the Eller College of Management.

The School’s facilities are extraordinary. Student workspaces are bright and airy, computer labs are spacious and up-to-date and the Program has a state-of-the-art GeoDesign lab that provides students with decision-making tools for best practices in planning.

We enjoy our award-winning building and landscape with spectacular views of the Santa Catalina Mountains. Tucson is an exciting and affordable place to live with rich cultural amenities and outdoor activities that offer diverse recreational and educational opportunities.

We take pride in our friendly collegial atmosphere and our extraordinary community of planners and designers working in one of the most inspirational environments in the world, the Sonoran Desert.

The University of Colorado (CU) is a multi-campus system with four locations: CU Denver’s downtown Denver campus, the Anschutz Medical Center in Aurora, CU Boulder and CU Colorado Springs. More than 55,000 undergraduate and graduate students currently pursue studies on these UC campuses.

The College of Architecture and Planning at CU Denver offers several graduate professional Masters degrees: MURP, MArch, MLA, MUD and an MS in Historic Preservation. Formal Dual Degree relationships exist between the MURP and Architecture (MURP/MArch); Landscape Architecture (MURP/MLA); Public Affairs (MURP/MPA); Business (MURP/MBA); Law (MURP/JD); and Public Health (MURP/MPH).

The MURP program is structured around three Initiatives: Healthy Communities, Urban Revitalization, and Regional Sustainability. Students have the ability to craft a MURP degree suited to their career goals and personal interests. After completing a set of comprehensive core courses including two studios, students pursue a self-directed curriculum comprised of any combination of elective courses they choose. Additionally, students complete a capstone project or thesis focusing on their unique area of interest. The MURP program uses Colorado as its classroom and capitalizes on its location in thriving downtown Denver by offering students significant opportunities to gain hands-on planning experience and have direct interaction with Colorado’s planning professionals.

The College’s three Centers afford additional opportunities for qualified students: Center for Sustainable Urbanism, Center of Preservation Research and the Colorado Center for Community Development.

The MURP program is a member of WICHE-WRGP, which means that students who are residents of any of the 15 western U.S. states qualify for Colorado resident tuition.

OTHER INFORMATION

All core faculty have at least 10 years each practicing planning outside of academia.

The College of Environment and Design, offers the degrees Bachelor of Landscape Architecture, Master of Landscape Architecture, Master of Historic Preservation and Master of Environmental Planning and Design. It has a single faculty of 41 and graduate courses such as History, Law, Urban Ecology, some design studios, graphics, computer graphics, GIS and community studies are shared.

Commonly Achieved Specialty Certificates (18-21 credit hours)
- Environmental Ethics
- Historic Preservation
- Historic Landscape Studies
- Conservation Ecology and Sustainable Development
- Water Resources
- G.I.S.

The MEPD program is offered in a traditional Graduate Program residency format on the Athens, Georgia campus. It is also offered in the nontraditional evenings and weekends format on the University’s Atlanta Metro Campus in Gwinnett County.

The program is unique in that there is a planning and design studio regional, city and neighborhood scales in each of the first three semesters as well as a graphics communication studio. All studios have involved actual projects and public clients in the U.S. as well as in Turkey, Costa Rica and Honduras. The exit requirement gives the option of thesis or practicum. The latter results in a fourth Planning and Design Studio in which the graduating student produces a professional plan document for a client who serves on the committee overseeing the final presentation and defense.

Concurrent Law and M.S. Bioregional Planning Degree Option
The College of Law and Bioregional Planning Program have formed a partnership where students may receive both the J.D. and M.S. in Bioregional Planning in as few as 8 semesters. Students have the opportunity to combine the study of law, science, policy, engineering, and social science to help create a community of "planner-lawyers" who can better serve clients in a planning context. Application and acceptance to both degree programs is required.

FOR OVER 40 YEARS, the Department of Urban Planning and Policy (UPP) at the University of Illinois at Chicago (UIC) has been leading the way by educating students in one of the world’s great cities for careers across the country and around the world. Grounded in social equity and sustainability, the Department has taught planning students to use innovative concepts, conduct simulations, evaluate programs and otherwise apply elements of the planning craft to analyze problems, craft solutions, and provide students with numerous research opportunities while providing meaningful teaching opportunities to talented students.

The Masters of Urban Planning and Policy (MUPP)
The MUPP degree program at UIC is the only professional planning program in the Chicago metropolitan area that is fully accredited by the Planning Accreditation Board. With a large and diverse student body, the MUPP program offers a comprehensive range of courses, including many specialized electives. Graduates can connect to a large network of alumni, both locally and around the world.

Masters and Ph.D. Programs
The Ph.D. in Urban Planning and Policy at UIC has a national and international focus. The program is designed for students who want to pursue careers as university faculty and professionals in government, private firms, and non-profit organizations. The UPP Scholar Award is available to select students, who receive four years of funding for the program. A productive research faculty and multiple research centers provide students with numerous research opportunities.

OTHER INFORMATION

Steeped in planning education history, the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign was one of the first schools in the country to offer planning studios and workshops. In 1913, Charles Mulford Robinson was appointed Professor of Civic Design, the first such professorship in the country and the notable combination of professional planning practice and scholarly study started by Robinson continues at our core. We have offered a master’s program since 1945 and a bachelor’s program since 1953. When the department was renamed the City Planning and Landscape Architecture Department in 1954, we were one of only 16 planning departments in the country. In 1965, we became the Department of Urban and Regional Planning. Our PhD in Regional Planning began in 1983.

As an Urban Planning program at a major land-grant university, our strength is our department’s sense of community within a broad range of opportunities. Our faculty are accessible. Our long history and base of over 2,000 alumni translate into a broad network of enriching connections for our students. Our Student Planning Organization and Planners’ Network enhance student life with academic, community, and social opportunities. We are a full-time residency program, with MUP concentrations in Sustainable Design & Development, Land Use & Transportation Planning, Local & Regional Economic Development, and Community Development for Social Justice. We offer opportunities for joint degrees as well as access to courses with allied programs in Architecture, Landscape, Law, Public Health, Recreation/Sport/Tourism, Agriculture and Consumer Economics, Geography, and the campus’s many international centers. Our department’s Smart Energy Design Assistance Center/SEDAC offers research and employment in sustainability. Opportunities for students to participate in the Network for European-United States Regional & Urban Studies and the China Academy of Urban Planning and Design help provide international experiences. Successful Foreign Language and Area Studies/FLAS Fellowship applications have supported several students each year in modern foreign languages in combination with area studies, international studies, or international or area aspects of professional studies.

Join us. Be a part of the second century of Planning Education at Illinois.

OTHER INFORMATION

Since our founding 50 years ago in 1964, The University of Iowa has been offering high quality graduate education in urban and regional planning at the master’s level. Our graduates have one of the highest pass rates on the American Institute of Certified Planners (AICP) exam.

Located in a vibrant urban and academic setting, the University of Iowa School of Urban and Regional Planning offers a fully accredited Master’s degree (either MA or MS) in Urban and Regional Planning. Areas of concentration include: economic development; geographic information systems (GIS); land use and environmental planning; housing and community development; and transportation. Joint degrees (with Law, Public Health, Social Work, or Civil and Environmental Engineering) are also offered. Our focus is on analytical urban planning, public policy, and sustainability. The School of Urban and Regional Planning is a campus, state, and national leader in community engagement and pioneered the Iowa Initiative for Sustainable Communities (IISC) (see http://iisc.uiowa.edu/), through which students from disciplines across campus provide key answers to important sustainability questions for communities in Iowa. In their second year Field Problems course, all our students participate in the development of a sustainability plan or report through the IISC. We have an outstanding set of students who are enabled by the graduate education they receive here to obtain good placements in the planning profession. Our faculty are recognized for both their scholarship and teaching, while also being engaged in the community.

Louisville, KY is a dynamic city with a rich culture, vibrant history, and strong neighborhoods. Nestled on the banks of the Ohio River, Louisville is the cultural, economic, and population center of the state of Kentucky. The city of Louisville currently finds itself in the midst of an urban rejuvenation that makes it the perfect laboratory to study urban planning, design, and development. The city features a quickly redeveloping downtown that is currently going through a renaissance. It also prides itself on a network of fantastic urban parks linked by an Olmsteadian planned parkway system. The city has a vibrant cultural scene where local musicians and artists are revered and thrive. Louisville is the home of the most famous horse race in the world, the Kentucky Derby and also many great music, culture and arts festivals that include: the St. James Art Fair, Forecastle Festival, Cherokee Art Fair, WorldFest, Bluegrass Festival, and Reggae Festival to name a few.

There is a strong sense of community felt in Louisville due to the many diverse neighborhoods that feature undying support for local business, development of community gardens and farmers markets, and redevelopment of the central business district. The program is closely linked to many community efforts and development projects as well as the Metropolitan government and thus is able to utilize local resources for research, publishing of academic articles, and planning and project development that has a direct impact on the quality of life of the city as a whole.

OTHER INFORMATION

Our informal department mission is “Finding Sustainable Solutions to Wicked Problems.” More officially, our shared goal is to empower students and advance practice in designing and planning sustainable communities and regions. We seek integrative, regenerative, community-based, beautiful solutions to serve the ecological, economic and social needs of human as well as natural systems. Our distinctive academic department, which combines landscape architecture and regional planning, enables us to connect spatial and social forms across multiple scales, from the site to the city to the region, and from design to plan to program and policy implementation. We offer particular strength in entrepreneurship and economic development, climate and green infrastructure planning, participatory practices, landscape and urban design, and regional planning.

Our alumni can be found in all levels of government as well as in consulting practice, real estate development, nonprofit service, and in academic and research activities in the US and abroad. They are involved in the frontiers of social and ecological change, such as community-based economic development, cultural and natural heritage protection, justice and equity planning, climate planning, and geographic and other information systems. The two-year MRP program offers a rich educational experience carefully balanced between theory and practice, so that our graduates can think critically about community challenges and know how to apply the best emerging practices in their areas of specialization. Students gain substantial experience in public speaking, professional and research writing, and skill development. We encourage cross-disciplinary inquiry, and have dual degrees including MLA/MRP, MRP/JD (Law); MRP/ MPPA (Public Policy and Administration) and MRP/MArch (Architecture) programs, as well as a five-year accelerated Bachelors of Science-plus-MRP program.

The PhD program in Regional Planning leads to a research degree for students interested in careers in the academic world or in research in public agencies or private corporations. We generally seek outstanding students whose research interests align well with faculty expertise, so that we can provide a high level of mentoring to all students. To learn more about faculty interests and expertise, potential applicants should review faculty publications, as well as the LARP graduate handbook. Students admitted to this program normally have a Master's degree in planning or a closely related field. Those with a Master's degree in other fields but with appropriate professional experience are given serious consideration and encouraged to apply. Please be aware that the university requires a minimum one academic year full-time residency for all doctoral students.

GRADUATE DEGREE

Master of Urban Planning

Professional Recognition: The Master of Urban Planning is accredited by the Planning Institute of Australia (PIA) and undergoes a regular review process for quality assurance.

Admission Requirements
1. The Selection Committee will evaluate the applicant’s ability to pursue the course successfully using the following criteria: a minimum three-year undergraduate degree with a weighted average of at least 65% in the final two years, or equivalent, and submission of a personal statement of up to 1000 words outlining relevant prior study and work experience, and motivation to undertake the course.

2. The Selection Committee may conduct interviews and tests and may call for referee reports and employer references to elucidate any of the matters referred to above.

About the degree
The Master of Urban Planning prepares students to be professionals who address pressing urban issues, both locally and internationally. The degree focuses on Australian and international policy and planning pertaining to human settlements and how we cope with challenging population and environmental issues. We do this through a mix of lectures, debate and discussion, seminars, studios and independent research.

Students are encouraged to:
• Think in a critical and reflective manner
• Respond creatively to the issues they confront
• Understand and manage the complexity inherent in planning problems
• Understand cities in an international comparative context
• Develop research skills
• Develop areas of specialisation
• Work in multi-disciplinary teams

The Master of Urban Planning:
• Introduces students to the operations of, and debates about, planning systems
• Encourages students to explore different perspectives on urban problems, policies, planning and practices
• Provides opportunities to learn the way planning decisions impact on real world situations
• Creates research opportunities so students can follow a supervised and self-directed learning path on a planning issue

The Master of Urban Planning comprises ‘core’ required-subjects, ‘electives’, a research thesis and the development of a specialisation. The core subjects provide students with the knowledge and technical skills needed to generate, evaluate, and implement plans as well as insight into economic and environmental change in cities.

The electives are premised on planning being inherently and necessarily a multi-disciplinary pursuit, and provides an interdisciplinary toolkit. Students can select subjects from within the Melbourne School of Design. Additionally, students are encouraged to draw electives from a diverse and prestigious campus community and subjects in economics, engineering, public health, development studies, social work, law, and other subjects of their choosing are available.

The research thesis enhances a student’s critical thinking and analytic ability, knowledge of and ability to implement research methods, skills in interpreting a complex policy environment, understanding of ethics associated with knowledge acquisition and usage, and report writing skills. The thesis provides students with the opportunity to develop their intellectual and career interests.

The specialisations provide differentiated learning options, reflect career choices and provide the expertise to seek employment in Australia and elsewhere in the world.

Finally, we encourage students to attend professional conferences and seminars in order to increase their knowledge of planning issues, to grow their professional networks and to share their findings with the scholarly community.
Course Structure
The Master of Urban Planning degree is 200 points (2 years full time, part-time equivalent)

In addition to the eight core subjects (100 points); the research thesis (25 points) four specialisation subjects (50 points); students can take two electives, which includes additional studio options (25 points). Including the research thesis and the many specialisation electives the student is able to select six subjects of particular interest to them.

Core subjects: The core subjects are:
- Planning Law and Statutory Planning
- Planning Theory and History
- Analytical Methods
- The Economies of Cities and Regions
- Land Use and Urban Design
- Planning Urban Sustainability
- Strategic Planning Studio
- Urban Governance
- Urban Planning Minor Thesis

Specialisations: Urban Planning specialisations are available in:
- International Development Planning
- Urban Development and Planning
- Social and Community Planning
- Environmental Planning

PLANNING FACULTY

Professor Richard Tomlinson
Chair in Urban Planning. BA, MCRP, MBA, MSc, PhD. Professor Tomlinson is Chair of Urban Planning in the Faculty of Architecture Building and Planning. Before moving to Australia he served as a consultant in Southern Africa and as an academic in South Africa and the USA. His consultancy clients included the post-apartheid South African Government, and provincial and local governments, The World Bank, USAID, UN Habitat a number of international NGOs, and the private sector. As an academic he has served as a Visiting Professor at the University of the Witwatersrand, Columbia University, a Visiting Scholar and SPURS Fellow at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and a Guest Scholar at the Brookings Institution and at the New School University. His recent research includes the effects of social media on urban policy knowledge, urban policy processes, slum upgrading in Mumbai and Cape Town, the urban legacy of sports mega events, and housing and the Australian city. His most recent publication is an edited book on Australia’s Unintended Cities: The Impact of Housing on Urban Development.

Professor Sun Sheng Han
Professor in Urban Planning. Master of Urban Planning Coordinator. MSc, PhD. Professor Han’s teaching and research are in the area of urban economic development and strategic planning. He teaches the Strategic Planning Studio, Managing Global City Regions, and Planning Asia.Pacific Cities Studio. He is author of 120 published works in the forms of refereed journal articles, monographs, book chapters, conference presentations and reports.

Carolyn Whitzman
Associate Professor in Urban Planning. BA (Hons); MA, PhD. Dr. Whitzman’s current research and teaching interests include the development and evaluation of integrated violence prevention initiatives at the local government level, increasing independent mobility for children, and the policy implications of planning for healthy and equitable cities in a national and international context.

Dr. Alan March
Senior Lecturer in Urban Planning. BURP, MTCP, PhD. Dr. March teaches planning theory, planning law and urban design. He has practised as an urban planner in Australia and overseas since (1991) His research and publications analyse international planning systems, theorise planning as democracy and examine urban design, risk, planning regulations and professionalism in urban planning.

Dr. David Nichols
Senior Lecturer in Urban Planning. PhD. Dr. Nichols teaches in urban planning history, theory and social planning. He has published in 20th century Australian planning and urban history as well as on cultural, socio,historical and heritage issues. He has recently completed work on a major research project on 20th century civic buildings in Australia and his current research includes work on the use of planning themes in fiction texts and issues of cultural sustainability in regional areas.

Dr. Anna Hurlimann
Senior Lecturer in Urban Planning. BSc, PhD. Dr. Hurlimann teaches subjects on planning for sustainability and research methods. Her research interests focus on environmental sustainability and community attitudes to environmental processes. Anna is currently working on a number of research projects from a range of funding sources including the Australian Research Council. Her projects investigate a diverse issues including: community attitudes to water conservation and alternative water sources, and planning policy to promote effective catchment management.

Dr. Jennifer Day
Lecturer in Urban Planning. BSc, MSc, PhD. Dr. Day recently completed her doctoral work in the Department of City and Regional Planning at the University of California, Berkeley. Her most recent work examined the effects of resettlement at the urban periphery for Shanghai households, with a focus on vulnerable populations. Her work continues in Chinese cities, with research interests that include transport capacity, building, outcomes of rebuilding urban villages, and the consequences of and alternatives to urban expansion. Additionally, her teaching and research interests include planning for resettlement zones and urbanization in the developing world.

Dr. Ole Fryd
Lecturer in Urban and Environmental Planning. MSc, PhD. Joining us in 2012 from the University of Copenhagen, Dr. Fryd’s research and teaching strengths encompass urban environmental planning and urban design with a specific focus on the development of integrated urban water and sanitation systems in Africa, Asia, and Europe.

OTHER INFORMATION

“Dream of a City” is the motto for the Division of City and Regional Planning at the University of Memphis. It alludes to the University’s motto – “Dreamers. Thinkers. Doers.” – while evoking Daniel Burnham’s exhortation to make big plans, and reflecting Dr. Martin Luther King’s vision of justice, unity, and opportunity. We hope to inspire students, community partners, and planners alike to recognize that we don’t have to settle for the faults, shortcomings, and injustices of our neighborhoods and places – that change is possible if there is vision. We each have our unique perspectives on what makes an ideal city.

The Graduate Program recently launched an international planning project which has brought two Sicilian professors to Memphis to share their research and teaching interests and sent a group of ten students, faculty, and staff to the city of Catania and the Simeto River valley in Sicily to conduct environmental research and visit a variety of state of the art ecological planning efforts.

Home to the University of Oregon, the city of Eugene, Oregon prides itself on being a great city for arts and outdoors, sustainability practices, and livability design in its urban core and neighborhoods. Pictured at sunrise, the city is located in the beautiful Willamette River valley with Spencer Butte anchoring the Ridgeline Trail public park system. The students and faculty members in the UO Department of Planning, Public Policy and Management engage in applied learning projects and research regularly with the city, the transit district, public schools, and nonprofit organizations.

Oregon is renowned for the Oregon Land Use system, considered a model state planning program in the U.S. Eugene is located 90 minutes from the coast and Cascade Mountains. It is a progressive city with trails, bike network, extensive bus service, and sustainability initiatives.

PPPM is known for its work on sustainability, collaborative and participatory approaches to planning, community development, and environmental planning. It is affiliated with the Community Service Center, providing students with access to real world experience with actual clients, and is also linked with the Institute for a Sustainable Environment, National Institute for Transportation and Communities, and the Sustainable Cities Initiative. The community and regional planning program offers many concurrent degree opportunities.

Our two-year degree trains policy-oriented planners for leadership positions in the public, nonprofit, and private sectors. The flexible program is ideal for students seeking a challenging education with a strong emphasis on applied learning. Students can develop a focus area as well as pursue a joint degree in programs such as architecture, environmental studies, law, and public administration.

Applications due February 1

Areas of concentration
Environmental planning and policy
Sustainable cities
Community development
Land use and the built environment

We do real work in real communities

Community Planning Workshop (CPW)
Award-winning program conducts work for communities across Oregon, giving teams of students and CPW planning professionals an opportunity to engage in work experience with clients.

Sustainable Cities Initiative (SCI)
A nationally recognized, interdisciplinary initiative focused on making cities more sustainable. Classes across campus work with a partner city to analyze problems, prepare plans, and share ideas with city staff and community members.

OTHER INFORMATION

The University of Pittsburgh’s Graduate School of Public and International Affairs (GSPIA) is dedicated to building the practical skills and values of public service, diversity and excellence in planning issues from the local level to the global. It is one of only three policy schools in the U.S. to have a top-20 program in city management and urban policy (US News, 2012) and have full membership in the Association of Professional Schools of International Affairs. GSPIA’s major in Urban Affairs and Planning is offered in the Masters in Public Affairs (MPA) and the Masters in International Development (MID) and educates students through a combination of rigorous academic coursework and practical experience in professional skills and urban development, offering extensive local and international opportunities. GSPIA students develop strong technical and analytical skills to understand a range of complex urban planning and regional development issues, crossing economic, social, political, environmental, and cultural dimensions.

GSPIA’s location offers an exceptional environment to study planning and urban affairs. From Pittsburgh’s history as one of the world’s most important industrial centers to its position today as the exemplar of how to rebuild and reimagine a post-industrial city, Pittsburgh and the Southwestern Pennsylvania region are important parts of a GSPIA student’s education. Students engage in critical planning and urban issues through fieldwork opportunities, class projects, guest lectures, internships, and professional ties. Capitalizing on GSPIA’s international connections, students in the MID program are additionally exposed to cutting-edge issues in cities and regions in the developing world, with many students traveling abroad in capstone seminars in Latin America or summer internships and semester abroad opportunities.

OTHER INFORMATION

The Muskie School of Public Service's Community Planning and Development program was inaugurated in 1997 and graduated its first students in (1999). The degree reflects the commitment to the environmental and community development values of the School's namesake, the late Senator Edmund S. Muskie.

The program focuses on the planning and development needs of New England communities, but prepares students to deal with issues encountered across the United States. In addition to the core courses, students may select from concentrations in land use and the environment, community and regional development, or a joint Masters-JD degree program with the University of Maine School of Law.

The student body is drawn primarily from Maine and New England states, and courses are offered on schedules suitable for both full and part-time students. Distance education options are increasingly available for courses. Students interested in learning about distance education options should contact the program Chair.

The CPD program is affiliated with three research centers located within the Muskie School which offer masters students a variety of opportunities to participate in professional research and community projects with tuition and stipend support. The Casco Bay National Estuary project is a cooperative program addressing the environmental quality of Casco Bay and its watersheds. The EPA New England Environmental Finance Center (http://efc.muskie.usm.maine.edu/) undertakes projects addressing smart growth issues throughout New England. The Casco Bay Estuary Partnership (http://muskie.usm.maine.edu/centers/cbep.jsp) is an EPA-funded program part of the National Estuary Program. The Maine Center for Business and Economic Research funded by the U.S. Economic Development Administration (http://usm.maine.edu/cber/) undertakes research and technical assistance projects in economic development and transportation. The CPD program is leading a five year research project funded by the National Science Foundation called the Sustainable Urban Regions Project.

OTHER INFORMATION

The 48-hour Master of Science in Urban and Regional Planning (MSURP) is designed to prepare students for leadership roles and careers in the public and private sectors of planning and designing communities and regions. The program has a strong focus on land use planning, design, policy, and economic, environmental, and cultural issues that shape urban and regional land development patterns in terms of infrastructure, housing, and open space systems. Emphasis is placed on developing research capabilities and graphic skills needed in planning. The degree program’s primary focus is to prepare students to become practitioners in the planning profession. The MSURP is taught in the College of Architecture with the support of the Department of Public Administration in the College of Public Policy.

All courses for the Master of Science in Urban and Regional Planning are offered at UTSA’s Downtown Campus in the historic Downtown District which dates from 1718 when the city was founded as a Spanish military garrison.

Planning at the University of Utah is surprising just about everyone who engages it. Within just a few years, it has elevated itself as a top tier program in the United States, producing research and graduates who are making significant contributions in a variety of professional roles and subfields. Beyond their academic pursuits, students at The U are also discovering for themselves a Utah that is ambitious, progressive and evolving.

The U is located in Salt Lake City, which is consistently ranked among the nation's most livable cities. Salt Lake City has a growing urban center, a rich religious history, distinctive neighborhoods, a world-class transit system, and a rather affordable cost of living. Surprising to first time visitors, Salt Lake City is home to an impressively cosmopolitan and diverse population and is becoming known for its alternative lifestyles and Bohemian culture: plentiful cafés, avid recreationalists, amenity migrants, music venues, tattoo parlors, and festivals across the calendar. Utah boasts some of the best skiing in the planet, abundant outdoor recreation, and an attractive location of the Five National Parks: Zion, Bryce Canyon, Capitol Reef, Canyonlands, and Arches. All of this is available within a few hours from The U.

The Department of City + Metropolitan Planning at the University of Utah is a community of faculty and students dedicated to enhancing the health and vitality of towns, cities, and regions through place-based and integrated approaches to quality growth, building in harmony with nature, placemaking, and capacity building. The College of Architecture + Planning, where the Department is located, is an active educational community with a commitment to collaboration and design and planning of the built environment, multi-disciplinary design, and the evolution of urbanism and urban ecological systems toward a more sustainable, resilient and livable future. Through the work of the planning community along with our professional colleagues in the region, the Department was newly accredited by the Planning Accreditation Board for an additional seven years to 2021, the longest accreditation period permitted.

The MCP is a two year degree program of core, elective and specialization courses. We offer four specializations: Smart Growth + Transportation; Ecological Planning; Urban Design; and Small Town + Resort Town Planning. Students can also enroll in Dual Degree Programs between Planning and Real Estate Development, or Planning and Law. Our students can elect to add one of three graduate certificates: Historic Preservation, Real Estate Development, and Urban Design. Plenty of options exist depending on what you want.

Be surprised by the freedom you have in shaping your MCP Program. Discover an evolving Utah that dispels old myths. Experience a lifestyle of your own making.

OTHER INFORMATION

The Master of Urban Planning program focuses on urban development, especially in the context of large cities and their suburbs and larger regional contexts. The program aims to develop the professional skills needed for planning practice with current technology and modern research methods. Master’s students focus heavily on critical thinking, communication skills including consensus-building and negotiation, and preparedness to work in the diverse social context of planning in large, metropolitan areas. The program also addresses the latest in sustainable practices, as students tackle the environmental issues that face urban areas today.

In addition to our Master's degree programs and specializations, the department offers an undergraduate Certificate in Urban Planning Studies and an interdisciplinary post-baccalaureate Certificate in Geographic Information Systems. Students also have the unique opportunity to receive dual Master’s degrees by participating in either the Architecture, Civil Engineering, or Public Administration coordinated degree programs. For more information about these programs, please visit the program web page: http://www4.uwm.edu/SARUP/information/academicprograms.html

Our location in the largest city in Wisconsin means that students have excellent access to a rich set of studio and internship experiences. The Urban Planning department at UWM has worked hand-in-hand with the City of Milwaukee on many projects, and offers students the advantage of using the city as a virtual classroom.

The University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee is an urban research university located on the east side of the city, less than two miles from downtown and only a few blocks from beautiful Lake Michigan in a quiet neighborhood of homes and small shops. The campus is easily accessible by walking, bike, and public transportation from many areas of the city. Milwaukee’s East Side has recently been a hotbed of development in which the University has played a major role. New developments have included graduate student housing in Milwaukee’s lively Prospect and North commercial district—an area of eclectic shops, restaurants and nightlife.

The Geography and Planning Department offers programs that bridge the physical and social sciences, combining theory with practical experience. Students gain knowledge and analytical skills that can be applied to social and environmental problems. Many alumni are employed at planning agencies and consultancies throughout the region. We have close to 100 percent retention and graduation of majors.

Our MPA Regional Planning concentration is appropriate for many career paths which value a combined knowledge of public administration as well as comprehensive planning, zoning, mapping, and demographic and environmental impacts of geographical change. Most students in the program aspire to planning or public administration careers, although some use this degree to broaden their knowledge and expertise for other employment opportunities. This degree supports working professionals who desire a career specialty or change. The concentration focuses on land use development and management at the local, county, and regional levels.

OTHER INFORMATION

Western Michigan University is located in Kalamazoo, Michigan, a mid-sized metropolitan area in Southwest Michigan. Less than one hour from the sandy shores of Lake Michigan, Kalamazoo is located halfway between Detroit and Chicago, and easily accessible by highway, Amtrak, or air via the Kalamazoo/Battle Creek International Airport (AZO).

The Kalamazoo area is known as a cosmopolitan region that is home to an innovation economy, a thriving arts and cultural scene, and other educational assets, including Kalamazoo College and the “Kalamazoo Promise” a nationally renowned program that offers full college scholarships to graduates of the Kalamazoo Public Schools.

Western Michigan University is a major state-supported research university with more than 24,000 students and 900 full-time faculty. WMU is one of 76 upper-tier public institutions nationally recognized as a Research University by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. Since 1999, WMU has been named every year by US News and World Report as one of the “Best National Universities”.

The Department of Geography at WMU was founded in 1905 and offers programs at both the undergraduate and graduate level. The Department is home to an outstanding array of resources including frequently updated computing facilities, award-winning student organizations, and the W.E. Upjohn Center for the Study of Geographical Change. The Department has offered studies in planning for more than 30 years and has a successful record of placing students in professional positions and graduate or doctoral programs.
