Pacific Division Public Forums

The Pacific Division’s program committee has organized two off-site forums to engage with general audiences on problems of intense public interest. This year’s forums are a pilot to measure demand and to learn how best to reach the local community. Meeting participants are welcome to attend. A small additional fee may be charged for AI, Automation, and the Good Life.

For information on times and locations, please consult apa-pacific.org, the APA Facebook page, or the meeting app.

AI, AUTOMATION, AND THE GOOD LIFE

Is AI a threat to humanity’s survival or a new path to human flourishing? Can philosophy enrich the public conversation about AI, automation and the good life, getting us beyond wild speculation about superintelligences and singularities? Join us for an evening of philosophical conversation with our experts to find out.

Don Howard is former director and fellow of the Reilly Center for Science, Technology, and Values and professor of philosophy at the University of Notre Dame.

Jerry Kaplan is a computer scientist, entrepreneur, fellow of the Stanford Center for Legal Informatics at Stanford University, and author of Humans Need Not Apply: A Guide to Wealth and Work in the Age of Artificial Intelligence.

Patrick Lin is director of the Ethics + Emerging Sciences Group and associate professor of philosophy at Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, and co-editor of the volume Robot Ethics (MIT Press).

AJung Moon is co-founder of the international Open Roboethics initiative (ORi), a Vanier Scholar and a Ph.D. candidate in mechanical engineering at the University of British Columbia.

John P. Sullins is professor of philosophy and chair of the Center for Ethics, Law, and Society at Sonoma State University.
Moderator: Shannon Vallor is associate professor of philosophy at Santa Clara University, president of the Society for Philosophy & Technology, and author of the forthcoming 21st Century Virtue: Technology and the Future of Human Flourishing.

HOW PROPAGANDA WORKS

Political propaganda is as powerful as ever, both in this U.S. election season and in fomenting upheaval abroad. Three leading philosophers converse with Yale University’s Jason Stanley about his new book, How Propaganda Works. They ask, When is speech propaganda? What forms can it take? Is it ever acceptable in democracy? How does it affect public debate and decision-making? How does it subordinate groups?

Jason Stanley is the Jacob Urowsky Professor of Philosophy at Yale University and writes on social and political philosophy.

Robert Gooding Williams is M. Moran Weston/Black Alumni Council Professor of African-American Studies and Professor of Philosophy at Columbia University, and is known as an authority on race as well as social and political philosophy.

Ishani Maitra is a professor of philosophy at the University of Michigan with expertise in the workings of language, feminist philosophy, and philosophy of law, especially free speech.

Allen Wood is Ruth Norman Halls Professor of Philosophy at Indiana University. He is a leading scholar of the history of ethics and social philosophy, especially in Germany.

Moderator: Rega Wood is a professor in the Department of Philosophy at Indiana University, Bloomington. She is an occasional political activist and a medievalist whose focus is on metaphysics, science, and ethics.
ART AND IMAGINATION: THE ROLE OF METAPHORS, TROPES, AND IMAGES IN SHAPING EXPERIENCE AND GUIDING ACTION

The workshop will analyze how cultural artefacts acquire meaning and value as an example of the process by which communities establish shared terms of reference. All conference attendees are welcome to attend the workshop, which is made up of three events:

Invited Symposium: Contemporary Perspectives on Aesthetic Judgment

CONTEMPORARY MORAL AND SOCIAL ISSUES:
An Introduction Through Original Fiction, Discussion, and Readings
By Thomas D. Davis from Wiley-Blackwell

ORIGINAL FICTION BY A PHILOSOPHER/NOVELIST engages the students to think about moral issues.

Examples:

"The Divided States of America": A satire in which the United States is dividing up into separate libertarian, conservative, liberal, and socialist districts.

The only TV network the financially strapped Socialist District had managed so far was a kind of low-budget PBS showing mostly old documentaries on such subjects as the oppression of workers, white-collar crime, global warming, and endangered species. There was coverage of endless meetings as the socialists tried to talk their way haltingly toward a classless society. One new socialist show called, “They Didn’t Deserve It!” attempted to lay some groundwork for this. The narrator would relate some individual success story. Then a panel of sociologists and psychologists would analyze the combination of factors—looks, character traits (including motivation), mental abilities, family connections, education—that had led to that person’s success and then show how all those particular factors could be traced back to other factors—family environment, fetal environment, genetics—over which the person had had no control. The moral of these anti-success narratives was always the same: What we come to be and what we accomplish are in the end “just a matter of luck”; thus, we do not deserve differential rewards as a result. It was heavy stuff—and more than a little depressing.
In “The River” a Westerner in an isolated outpost is faced with a steady stream of people who will die unless he makes Peter-Singer-style sacrifices to save them.

“But the Anansi: We can’t just let them die.”
“Look, I’m sorry, Rennert. I know the situation’s hell, but you’ve got to get some perspective. You know Africa: It keeps on making its own hell.”
“The Anansi didn’t make this situation.”
“Maybe not this one,” said Bjornson. “But don’t be naive. Victims always look innocent until they’re back on top: Then they turn out to be as nasty as everyone else. The Anansi have had their own violent history. They’re not innocent. The oppressed are just oppressors down on their luck.”
“Cynicism’s too easy an excuse for not helping.”

ON THE ISSUE OF MORALITY, OBLIGATION AND MOTIVATION:

If morality demands too much, too few people will follow it: Morality becomes like a general marching into battle with no force behind him, his troops all having deserted. On the other hand, if what passes as morality fights no battles and demands almost nothing, one has to wonder if it really is morality: Humans are far from perfect; isn’t the point of morality to at least push us to be better?

DISCUSSIONS ARE WRITTEN IN PROSE STUDENTS WILL WANT TO READ.

ON THE STATUS OF ANIMALS AND HUMAN EMBRYOS:

A friend who attended an animal rights conference told me about a woman who was affectionately dubbed “The Chicken Lady” for her crusade on behalf of factory-farmed chickens. One can imagine the Chicken Lady making her pitch to some pro-life people and having the pro-life people think: “Is she nuts? Chickens? We’re talking about human beings!” The Chicken Lady might respond indignantly that her chickens, unlike their embryos, have independent lives and can feel pain.

FICTION, DISCUSSION AND READINGS COVER:

• Value theory • moral theory • morality and politics
• world poverty • abortion • animal welfare
• the environment • genetic engineering

TOWER LOBBY
Award for Excellence and Innovation in Philosophy Programs

The American Philosophical Association and the Philosophy Documentation Center sponsor the annual Prize for Excellence and Innovation in Philosophy Programs. This prize recognizes programs that undertake new initiatives with excellence and success, and encourages others to follow their lead.

Award
The prize includes an award plaque and campus-wide electronic access to PDC philosophy resources for one year. It gives professional recognition to the winning program and real benefits its host institution.

Eligibility and Criteria
Eligible programs include philosophy departments or other organizations that develop programs or projects that promote research, teaching, or the public understanding of philosophy. Excellence is assessed by a record of achievement, the accomplishment of defined goals, and the appropriateness of the program for emulation by others in the field.

Any APA member may nominate a program. Questions about nomination procedure may be directed to prizes@apaonline.edu.
