I. Names and Affiliations

Philosophy Talk's Steering Committee for this grant proposal consists of:

John Perry, Distinguished Professor of Philosophy at the University of California at Riverside, and Henry Waldgrave Stuart Professor of Philosophy Emeritus at Stanford University.

Ken Taylor, Henry Waldgrave Stuart Professor of Philosophy at Stanford University.

If you have any questions regarding this proposal, please contact Dr. Perry at (650) 796-2798

II. Curriculum Vitae for Each Member of the Steering Committee

Curriculum vitae for each member of the Steering Committee can be found at the bottom of this proposal.

III. Abstract of the Proposal

Philosophy Talk is a weekly public radio program, co-hosted by Ken Taylor and John Perry. Of the approximately thirty-six new programs each year about half are aired live from the studios of KALW in San Francisco. The others are recorded at public venues around the nation, edited, and then aired. Where possible, we make arrangements with colleges and universities to perform and record the show at on-campus venues. Unfortunately, America's institutions of higher learning are suffering savage cuts in funding, and the humanities in particular face a terrible burden. The goal of Philosophy Talk is to bring the value and joy of deep and critical thought to students, and the lay public, without regard to the economic status or educational background of its audience. Part of this mission is reaching students who attend schools at which, of necessity, humanities education, and philosophy in particular, have become a luxury.

IV. Account of the Project's Purpose

The purpose of the project is to make possible the opportunity for Philosophy Talk to reach underserved students with its successful live shows. Several times each year we take Philosophy Talk on the road to campuses across the country. Such visits have proven to be very valuable, and well-attended events, and students are clearly moved by, and engaged in, the dialog we bring to these schools. However, these visits also represent a fairly large expenditure of funds for Philosophy Departments, with the consequence that only the better-funded schools have had the ability to participate. To date, participating institutions have included Stanford University, University of Oregon, Pacific University, Mount Holyoke, and many others.

We seek to remedy this situation in the 2012-2013 academic year, with the help of the APA, by making Philosophy Talk available to schools that might not otherwise have sufficient funds to support our visit. We will solicit and entertain proposals from such schools, ultimately selecting two schools that are willing to match the APA's support. The Project Budget (below) will provide details on the kind, and amount, of support we seek. The selection process will focus on need, both in terms of an existing financial deficiency with respect to philosophy department funding, and in terms of a relative demand for philosophical encouragement and inspiration from sources external to the school.

Each of the two campus events we are proposing will be recorded like any other live recording of Philosophy Talk. The hour-long episode will ultimately be broadcast on roughly 60 stations across the country, received in podcast form by thousands of Philosophy Talk podcast subscribers, and the APA's generous support will be gratefully acknowledged in each case.

After eight seasons, Philosophy Talk has achieved a very large and devoted following. We perform live shows in the bay area, and all over Oregon on a regular basis, where large audiences exhibit a heartening appetite for the challenging philosophical dialog in which they participate. We feel that Philosophy Talk is the right forum, and contains the right ingredients, to inspire students for whom a live appearance, through no fault of their own, might otherwise prove cost-prohibitive.

Such visits are not inexpensive. These public performances include the two co-hosts, a guest who must be on site, our "Roving Philosophical Reporter" (an segment with a trained radio interviewer and a guest who in some sense exemplified "real world" aspects of the topic under discussion), and songs and skits by Merle Kessler, aka Ian Scholes, the very popular "sixty second philosopher". In addition our producer and assistant producer are required, and local sound engineers must be engaged. For venues in or near the Bay Area, where an overnight stay is not required, the minimal expense is $2500. Travel expenses add another $1500 to $3000, depending on whether one or two nights (as with visits to the eastern part of the U.S.) are required.

The costs of such visits exceed the discretionary funds available to most philosophy departments. Typically these costs have been covered by conference funds or funds associated with university-wide programs. But there are many institutions, in particular non-elite colleges and underfunded public universities, where such funding is not practical.

We are asking for $5,000 to cover subsidies for two or more such venues. We envisage making the program available by offering matching funds from the APA grant, so departments (and often their undergraduate philosophy clubs) can bring the program if they can raise in the neighborhood of $1000.

We believe these visits foster interest in philosophy among the students at the institutions, provide an interesting professional experience for faculty, and increase the visibility of and interest in philosophy among non-philosophy students, faculty and administration, and so fit well with the purpose of APA grants.

V. Timeline

The project we are proposing involves two separate live performances of the Philosophy Talk program at campuses yet to be determined. These performances will take place during the academic year 2012-2013. We shall therefore solicit proposals from colleges and universities in September, 2011, asking that all proposals be submitted no later than December 1st, 2011. The schools that are chosen will be notified on January 15th, 2012, and we will then begin the process, with each school, of determining the best dates and venues for our on-campus appearances.

VI. Project Budget and Budget Narrative

Budget:

Basic Budget for each appearance, assuming minimal travel, and no overnight stay.

Local recording engineer	$750
Producer	$400 per diem
Asst. Producer	$200 per diem
Roving Reporter	$200 per diem
60 Second Philosopher	$200 per diem
Musician	$200 per diem
Co-hosts honorarium	$1,000
TOTAL:	$2,950

Additional costs for Western United States (one night accommodations, transportation, plus flights)

Additional costs for Eastern United States (two nights accommodations, local transportation, plus flights)

Narrative: the availability of subsidized visits will be announced on our program and our website, through APA publications, and through email to faculty add a large number of institutions. We will choose two or more venues, the number depending mainly on the distance from the Bay Area of the venues. We will then arrange the logistics with the local departments and other local organizers.

VII. Designation of the Fiscal Agent

Philosophy Talk is a part of The Leland Stanford Junior University, and the fiscal agent for this grant application is:

Vera G. Haugh
Finance Officer
Philosophy & Religious Studies
450 Serra Mall, Building 70
Stanford, CA 94305
650-723-3323
vhaugh@stanford.edu

VIII. Information about Other Funding Obtained or Sought

At the time of this proposal, Philosophy Talk is mainly funded by Stanford University. However, we were recently awarded a grant by the John Templeton Foundation in the amount of $353,000 for the development and broadcast of 12 new episodes over the next two years. We have also secured underwriting support from EPGY in the amount of $17,000, and we are halfway through that 26-week underwriting period. We intend to apply for an NEH grant in August, but the scope of the proposal, and hence the amount to be requested, has not yet been determined.

IX. Description of the Method of Project Assessment at Completion

At the completion of each of the two performances, we will provide the APA with a report detailing the results of the project. The project's accomplishments (expected and unexpected) will be specified in a clear and unvarnished manner. The criteria for the project's success will center on both the attendance of the two performances, and the benefit to participants. The attendance numbers will be made available to the APA following each performance. In addition, in our solicitation of proposals from the schools, we will include the requirement that the chosen schools submit a report that details the benefits of the Philosophy Talk appearance, as well as what could be improved. This information will then be forwarded to the APA. Finally, two compact disc copies of each of the two episodes recorded will be mailed to the APA (with additional copies may be made available if desired.)

X. Description of the Promotion of the Project to Philosophical and Lay Public

Historically, we have opened our live, on-campus appearances to the broader public, and this will be true of the APA project we are proposing. Thus, in the case of each chosen school, we will engage local media from both a public relations, and an advertising standpoint. As is typically the case when we record Philosophy Talk on a college campus, local and regional newspapers, magazines, and websites will be contacted, and the story of Philosophy Talk's appearance will be pitched. Furthermore, any and all opportunities for free advertising, e.g. local online calendars, will be exploited, and some paid advertising will be considered through vehicles like Google Ad Words, and Facebook. Finally, entire database of nearly 7,000 Philosophy Talk fans will be informed of the shows via Constant Contact, and our widely followed Facebook, and Twitter fan pages will heavily promote each performance.
