National BDPA Announces Infosys as a Bronze Sponsor

Largo, Md. – Black Data Processing Associates (BDPA), the largest African American Information Technology Association in the United States, proudly announced Infosys, a global leader in consulting, technology, and outsourcing solutions, as a Bronze Sponsor of their 2017 National Technology Conference and Career Fair that will be held in Cincinnati, Ohio.

"We are honored to have the support of Infosys, one of the leading global Information technology consulting companies in the world. We look forward to partnering with Infosys in the months ahead," reported Mike A. Williams, National BDPA President.

Started in 1981 by seven engineers, Infosys has a growing global presence with over 85 offices and 100 development centers across the Asia-Pacific, Americas, Europe and the Middle East (www.infosys.com).

Becky Lowe, Infosys Human Resources Vice President stated, "Our strength comes from our diversity. Infosys is committed to sponsoring BDPA and its mission to support the next generation of the IT industry. Technology's influence is deep and wide, and its future relies on a robust, capable and global IT industry with inclusive perspectives and philosophies."

BDPA has 40 chapters across the United States and is a catalyst for professional growth and technical development for those in IT. BDPA continues to bridge the digital divide by providing training and career growth opportunities for its members.
