The Aide’s Role in Pressure Ulcer Prevention & Care

April 14, 2011
3:00 pm - 4:00 pm

Pressure ulcers are a serious and common problem of older adults, affecting approximately one million Americans (primarily those over 65 years old). Immobility, chronic illnesses and lifestyle factors can all contribute to the development of pressure ulcers. Pressure ulcers can have serious and even life-threatening complications. This workshop will provide the aide with information on special pressure sore prevention products and techniques, recognizing pressure sore stages, nutritional support, patient self-image, pain control needs, and signs and symptoms to report to the Registered Nurse.

The presenter for this teleconference is Jan Helsper, RN. Jan has been in home care for over 20 years with an extensive background in medical review and performance improvement. She also has extensive compliance experience with both a fiscal intermediary and several large home care agencies in the southeastern US. More recently, Jan has spent 4 years as the Executive Director of a therapeutic riding center that provides hippotherapy and other equine assisted activities to children and adults with disabilities and long term illnesses. Jan is a graduate of the West Suffolk Hospital Nursing School in Suffolk, England.

Enjoy the convenience and cost-efficiency of a telephone workshop. There is no travel time involved and no limit to the number of attendees from your agency who may participate at your site through one phone line. All you need is a speaker telephone & a room large enough for your staff. It is a controlled, radio-like environment where you will gather your staff, dial an 800 number, state your verbal pass code and you’re connected! You will also be able to participate in a Q&A portion.

Registration Deadline
April 12, 2011

Registrations may not be shared between agencies - the agency’s registration covers the access of only one phone line into the teleconference. The handouts and call-in information will be emailed to the contact person prior to the teleconference.
