

JPMA Statement on the Passage of TSCA Reform

The Juvenile Product Manufacturers Association (JPMA) has been a strong advocate for a modernized Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA) that ensures the safe use of chemicals, encourages the development of new products, and protects American jobs and public health. Working closely with likeminded stakeholders and with the help of our members, today we are able to celebrate this tremendous achievement and applaud the first Congress in 40 years to reform our nation's primary chemical management law.

Improving the regulation of chemicals used in commerce has a significant impact on industry, from the suppliers, to products and services as well as the millions of workers we represent in the juvenile industry. Enactment of a reformed TSCA creates a more predictable regulatory environment and will greatly help in unifying laws and regulations at a national level.
