Symposium 2017 Sponsorship Opportunity

To Everyone Who Cares About Wildlife:

NWRA is asking for your donations to save wildlife. Typically, 400 to 500 wildlife rehabilitators, educators, and veterinarians from across the continent receive the very best education and skills training at our annual symposium. Symposium 2017 is March 7–11 in Williamsburg, Virginia, where our host is the Wildlife Center of Virginia. We are seeking your assistance to provide specialized training for

- wildlife rehabilitators who work every day to save injured, orphaned, and sick wild creatures and to prevent needless suffering and deaths;
- wildlife veterinarians who need specialized skills to treat medical problems in wildlife so each wild animal can survive and thrive after release; and,
- wildlife educators who provide advice and education to caring citizens (children and adults), helping them understand that healthy habitat is necessary for survival of wildlife and humans.

These are very special people with unique knowledge and skills! Not everyone can safely provide successful, individualized, hands-on wildlife care with the goal of keeping wild creatures wild and releasing them back into native habitat. Some of us can help best by contributing money.

Donate now to help NWRA produce a successful Symposium with educational presentations and hands-on skills training taught by qualified wildlife veterinarians and skilled rehabilitators. Every dollar you donate helps to ensure the symposium runs smoothly, provides a quality program, and makes available all supplies and equipment necessary. Choose your preferred sponsor option.

Why do we need your help? Since many individuals who provide care for wildlife do so totally on a volunteer basis and many are self-funded, every attempt is made to hold symposium costs at a minimum to facilitate attendance. Most wildlife rehabilitation centers and clinics are nonprofit organizations that rely on donations. Your contributions reduce registration fees by covering symposium expenses!

NWRA members treat hundreds of thousands of wild animals and answer just as many phone calls and emails each year. For 35 years, NWRA has successfully provided high quality symposiums, training classes, educational publications, and a strong networking system. Donations make it happen!

The NWRA Board of Directors and National Conference Manager pledge to use your donations wisely and effectively. Your contributions are sincerely appreciated! Donors receive letters to use for tax purposes and are gratefully acknowledged to all our members and to symposium attendees.

Thank you sincerely for any amount you can give, and for helping our members save wildlife!
