VCU Health is pleased to welcome

Lauren Siff, MD

Dr. Lauren Siff is a Richmond native and graduate of VCU School of Medicine who is thrilled to return home after training at the top institutions across the country. Following her residency in Obstetrics and Gynecology at Tufts Medical Center, she completed in-depth subspecialty fellowship training in Female Pelvic Medicine and Reconstructive Surgery at the Cleveland Clinic and is excited to bring these skills to the women of Richmond.

Dr. Siff provides comprehensive medical and advanced surgical treatments to women of all ages who are suffering from pelvic floor disorders. Her particular areas of focus are pelvic organ prolapse, urinary and fecal incontinence, overactive bladder, recurrent urinary tract infections, defecatory and sexual dysfunction, maternal birth trauma, vesicovaginal and rectovaginal fistulae, vulvar disorders, and complex pelvic surgery. Dr. Siff tailors treatments to each individual patient and chooses the best possible plan to accomplish each woman's goals, improving their quality of life. She performs all available routes of pelvic organ prolapse and anti-incontinence surgery, including vaginal and minimally invasive reconstruction (conventional laparoscopy or da Vinci robotics), with or without hysterectomy; offering both native tissue repairs and synthetic grafts. She also performs and interprets diagnostic studies such as anorectal physiology, endoanal and pelvic ultrasonography, and urodynamic testing. Dr. Siff also specializes in office procedures that include diagnostic cystoscopy, injection of periurethral bulking agents for stress urinary incontinence, or injection of intradetrusor botox for overactive bladder.

Dr. Siff has a long history of leadership and administrative experiences, as well as a commitment to education and research. She is honored to have received many accolades for clinical excellence, teaching, teamwork and compassion. Dr. Siff's upbeat personality, professional character, strong work ethic, compassionate communication skills and bedside manner make her a perfect fit to take care of women with complicated pelvic health problems. She is board certified by the American Board of Obstetrics & Gynecology.
