Welcome from the President

Dear Conference Attendees:

Welcome to Arlington, VA and the 2013 AHRD International Research Conference in The Americas – Celebrating 20 years of Leading HRD Through Research.

I am delighted to welcome you to our conference and our scholarly community focused on leading the field of HRD through research. Our conferences bring together scholars and scholar-practitioners to discuss theories, research, and informed practice to improve the field of HRD and the diverse organizations that we represent and serve. In addition, the conference is designed to foster fellowship, collaborative relationships, and networking opportunities that are beneficial to your professional and personal development. I encourage you to take advantage of the many different types of sessions occurring over the next few days, and to expand your understanding, build your network, and of course also have fun.

I also want to take advantage of this opportunity to thank everyone who has worked so hard to make this happen. This includes Kathie Pugaczewski (AHRD Executive Director), Carissa Broderick (AHRD Conference Organizer), Julia Storberg-Walker (SVP, Conferences & Events), and the extremely busy program committee of Julie Gedro, Diane Chapman, and Katie Desiderio. In addition, hundreds of other people volunteered many thousands of hours as Track Chairs, reviewers, symposia chairs, presenters, and more. This illustrates that the conference only happens as a result of volunteer effort from our members, and I want to thank everyone for supporting the conference through their time and energy. We are only here in Arlington because of you!

Looking toward the future, there are other AHRD conferences on the horizon. In June (5 to 7), the University Forum for Human Resource Development (UFHRD) and AHRD will sponsor the 14th International Conference on Human Resource Development Research and Practice across Europe, being hosted by Brighton Business School, University of Brighton (UK). In November (7 and 8), our 12th International Conference of the AHRD Asia Chapter will be held in Taipei, Taiwan and is hosted by the Graduate Institute of HRD, National Taiwan Normal University. Further out, the 21st AHRD Americas Conference is being held in Houston from February 19-22, 2014, and we will soon circulate a call for papers.

Beyond conferences, members of AHRD can take advantage of a variety of benefits. There are many exciting reasons to be a member of AHRD, including providing four refereed research journals, special interest groups, the Program Excellence Network (PEN), Webinars, web-based resources, and a variety of other member services. Accordingly, these strategically focused activities and initiatives are designed to meet the scholarly interests of our members and the broader field of HRD.

This is an exciting time to be a member of AHRD and to participate in the initiatives that are “leading HRD through research.” It is my sincere hope that you will continue to make AHRD your academic and professional home for many years to come.

Thanks very much for attending our conference!

Darren Short
AHRD President

Benefits of Membership

Human Resource Development as a subject area brings together a diverse community of people interested in training, workplace learning, adult education, organizational learning and performance, OD, career development, and other people-development growth topics. AHRD is a family of academics, practitioners and students who share the same passion for Human Resource Development, and for improving it through research. AHRD is a professional home, a network, a place to learn and share, a place to publish and present, and a place to meet others who share their passion for HRD. Members receive:

- Online access (and/or hard copy versions available) to four refereed journals, one of which is SSCI-cited:
  - Advances in Developing Human Resources
  - Human Resource Development International
  - Human Resource Development Quarterly
  - Human Resource Development Review
- Monthly Digest enewsletter
- Webinars on up-to-the-minute topics
- HRD consultant list
- Access to membership in the Program Excellence Network
- Special Interest Groups, such as Critical HRD & Social Justice Perspectives, Cultural Diversity, HRD Theory, International HRD, Qualitative Inquiry, Quantitative Research Methods, Scholar-Practitioner, Virtual HRD
- Reduced fees for conference registration

The growing role of human capital in producing economic output has accelerated since the early 1980s. Increasing skill requirements have resulted from a complex mix of technology change and shifting competitive requirements. Between 1946 and 1973, in the golden age of the American Economy, our competitiveness was largely based on our ability to produce standardized goods and services at the lowest prices. Since the ‘80s competitive standards have become more complex; including price but also extending to quality, variety, customization, innovation, costumer service, speed, and novelty. At the same time, computer-based technologies have increasingly allowed us to meet these new competitive requirements at a relatively low cost. In combination the technology shift along with the new competitive standards have increased skill requirements on the job.

About Dr. Tony Carnevale

Dr. Carnevale currently serves as Director of the Georgetown University Center on Education and the Workforce. He has a wealth of experience working at the intersection of education and employment policy. Among his leadership positions, Dr. Carnevale has served as Chair of the Human Resources Sub-Committee of the White House Commission on Productivity under President Ronald Reagan, as Vice President for Public Leadership at the Educational Testing Service (ETS) and as Director of Human Resource and Employment Studies at the Committee for Economic Development (CED). During his time at ETS, he was appointed by President George W. Bush to serve on the White House Commission on Technology and Adult Education. And while at CED, he was appointed by President Bill Clinton to chair the National Commission on Employment Policy.

2013 Pre-Conferences

Introduction to Action Learning Workshop: Action Learning – A Powerful Innovative Tool for Developing Leaders, Solving Problems, Building Teams, and Transforming Organizations

Presenter: Mike Marquardt

Action learning is not only an effective problem solving process but also has been valuable to a growing number of organizations worldwide as a powerful tool for developing leaders, teams and organizations. In this session, participants will discover the six essential components for successful action learning programs, explore the steps and processes of implementing action learning, and have the opportunity of practicing action learning in groups of 5-6 members. Successful application of action learning in companies such as Microsoft, Sony Music, Panasonic, Goodrich, Samsung, and Boeing as well as with universities and government agencies will be described.

Come to this workshop if you would like to:
- Understand and demonstrate how and why action learning is effective in solving problems, building teams, developing leaders, and creating learning organizations.
- Apply the six components and two ground rules of action learning as well as the questioning and reflection processes of action learning.
- Understand the skills and roles of the action learning coach.

Workshop Schedule:

A. Introduction and overview of action learning
   - Essential elements in action learning
   - Types of action learning programs
   - Stages in action learning

B. Demonstration of action learning

C. Leveraging the benefits of action learning
   - Problem-solving
   - Team building
   - Leadership development
   - Organizational learning
   - Professional growth and development

D. Questions and answers
Mining for Gold: Translating and Positioning the Best of HRD Theory and Research to Improve Practice

HRD theory and research provides a treasure trove of ideas and practices that can improve organizational success – but only if we can get others to buy in. HRD professionals and influential scholars need to be able to find and shine up the “golden nuggets” that should be applied to everyday HRD practice and important HRD initiatives. To do that, we need to call on the translation and influence skills that are core to the role of scholar-practitioner.

Come to this workshop if you would like to:

• Sharpen your ability to analyze theory and research for “golden nuggets” – big ideas and critical practices that can improve organizational effectiveness.
• Gain practice in translating golden HRD ideas into relatable and appealing language for others.
• Improve your success at influencing others to apply HRD’s golden ideas and practices with fidelity.

Audience

The workshop is specifically designed for:

• HRD practitioners in any specialty area who need to sell their ideas to business partners.
• HRD scholars who want to communicate their recommendations so practitioners will use them.

About Catherine Lombardozzi

Catherine Lombardozzi is founder and principal of the consulting practice, Learning 4 Learning Professionals, dedicated to supporting the professional development of designers, facilitators, faculty members, learning consultants, and learning leaders. Having worked in leadership roles in corporate learning and development for more than 30 years, she understands the challenges of the day-to-day work in L&D. Catherine is a strong advocate for scholarly practice, and has been active in the scholar-practitioner interest group at the Academy of HRD for over a decade. She is a regular presenter at both practitioner and academic conferences, currently sharing experiences and suggestions for designing comprehensive learning environments and for engaging in scholarly practice.

About Martin B. Kormanik

Martin B. Kormanik is President & CEO of O.D. Systems, a 32-year old Alexandria, Virginia-based corporation providing management assessment, consultation, facilitation, coaching, and training services to corporations, nonprofits, and government agencies. His specialty is human resource and organization development. Improving practice through application of theory and research has been a constant in Dr. Kormanik’s work. An active member of AHRD since 1999, he has chaired committees and served on the Board of Directors.

His research focuses on individual and organizational learning and change, particularly the construct of awareness development at both individual and organizational levels. His work has been published in conference proceedings, journal articles, and online publications, including Advances in Developing Human Resources (ADHR), Human Resource Development International, Human Resource Development Review, AI Practitioner, Journal of European Industrial Training, and ASTD Links. He served as co-editor for two ADHR issues, serves as a member of that journal’s editorial board (2009-2015), and was named Associate Editor (2012-2015). He has co-authored contributions to the Encyclopedia of Management Theory and the book Case Studies and Activities in Adult Education and Human Resource Development.
An Introduction to the Writing and Publishing Process: Identifying Decision Points, Recognizing the Component Parts of a Manuscript, and Using Tools to Improve Writing

Writing for publication is essential for students, academics, and consultants. The skills necessary to create a publishable manuscript are similar to the skills used to write effective memos, reports, and other work products. This workshop is designed to guide participants through the professional writing process with the goal of developing a publishable manuscript. The workshop begins with a discussion of decisions generally made prior to working on the manuscript. Next, we will provide an overview of the component parts and relationships between the parts of a manuscript. We will offer insights regarding tools helpful to creating a polished manuscript. The workshop will conclude by providing participants with feedback on their work in progress.

Come to this workshop if you would like to:
• Understand the writing, research and publication process.
• Increase the likelihood of creating a publishable manuscript.
• Improve your writing and publishing skills.
• Receive feedback on a project you are working on.

Audience:
This workshop is specifically designed for graduate students, former participants in the emerging scholars’ course, new graduates, and early career academics.

Workshop Schedule:
The workshop will follow the current organization of the Workbook for Scholarly Writing and Publishing (forthcoming) presented below. This workbook will be a companion to The Handbook of Scholarly Writing and Publishing (2011) published by Jossey Bass. Because there will not be enough time to cover all topics in depth, participants will complete a survey prior to the workshop to assess current writing for publication skills. This will allow us to create a customized workshop based on participant needs. Participants should bring a laptop and a work in progress (a hard copy and on a flash drive); this could be a manuscript being prepared for submission to a journal, a class paper or a draft from a dissertation to be revised into a manuscript.

Workshop Part 1: An overview of the workbook

Workshop Part 2: Reviewing participants’ work in progress

Breakfast Food ‘N’ Thought Sessions

Appreciative Inquiry as a Foundational Approach to HRD
Rod Githens, University of Louisville
Christine Wiggins-Romesburg, University of Louisville

Appreciative inquiry (AI) remains relatively unexamined within HRD, despite having had a major impact on organization development (OD) practice over the last 25 years. AI uses organizational strengths to build on past successes and create new futures. On the other hand, dominant approaches to OD and HRD focus on developing interventions to solve problems. The major focus of the session will be to consider newer approaches to HRD to embrace informal learning, knowledge sharing/creation, supportive organizational culture, and other self-sustaining HRD as well as exploring what empirical research might be conducted in order to consider factors contributing to the success of AI initiatives.

Managers’ Paradoxical View of Performance
Robert Lion, Idaho State University

The research framework sets out to better understand what the researcher has viewed as a paradoxical framework of employee needs and factors that influence performance, meaning that managers may commonly view factors that impact their own performance as variables quite different than those of their direct reports. And because of this, managers risk under-supporting and misdiagnosing their subordinates’ needs. This session seeks input as to the utility of further examining the research opportunities associated with how many managers view their own motives, drivers, and needs versus that of their direct reports and the potential implications of this on workplace performance.

Understanding the Underlying Philosophies for Leadership Today: Exploring Leadership Theories from Different Perspectives
Kristina Natt och Dag, North Carolina State University

Through an exploration of the philosophical foundations to leadership the session will focus on what are the leading contributing philosophies are today. Furthermore, how could exploring leadership from a philosophical perspective enrich the topic, today and in the future? The facilitator of the session hopes to conduct a conversation with practitioners and scholars interested in this phenomenon, sharing their own experiences and thoughts of leadership theory and philosophy.
The Changing Landscape of HRD Enabled by Technologies
Sponsored by Technology & Distance Learning SIG
Wenhao David Huang, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign
The landscape of HRD research and practice has been changing as the result of rapidly advancing information and communication technology (ICT). HRD processes are no longer confined to learning-only activities, stationary locations, and specific temporal and spatial boundaries. That is, with today’s technologies, playing and socializing enhance learning; mobility has become essential for information access and sharing; and global collaboration is often only one online call away. To address this obstacle, this FnT session intends to initiate a collective dialogue among HRD membership to look at the authentic effects of technologies on HRD processes. A panel of experts on technology integration in HRD will facilitate the discussions during the session.

Executive Coaching and Career Development
Rubina F. Malik, Morehouse College
The limited amount of research combined with the growth of the executive coaching field, has created confusion, leaving unanswered questions about what coaching is, where it comes from, and what it does. Although there are many definitions for coaching, and there are many models for coaching, what is lacking is a strong foundation due to a limited amount of empirical research on the efficacy of executive coaching. Session discussion will focus on executive coaching in the context of career development and how it can be used as an intervention to support individuals’ career development goals and organizations’ objectives.

Do We Need to Put Humanity Back into Human Resource Development?
Terry Brown, Northern Illinois University
The theory and practice of Human Resource Development frequently involves the daily development, application, and implementation of countless numbers of interventions. These interventions often emerge from and/or incorporate the scientific method, with the objective of improving one or more condition(s). However, the theories and practices of the scientific method lend themselves to abstracting the humanness out in lieu of routinized models of best practice. From this vantage point, a case can be argued that HRD interventions, while being useful, regularly give rise to, among other issues, the unintended creation of dependencies, the imposition of externally derived values, a disconnection from daily realities, and/or result in the creation of other problems or issues.

Transition and Presence of Faculty to an Online Environment
Pooneh Lari, North Carolina State University
With many educational institutions now targeting their population at a distance, the faculty have no choice but to comply with this transition. As a result of this transition from a face-to-face to an online environment, numerous issues such as personal, pedagogical, and professional have arisen. The purpose of this research was to look at how this transition has affected the faculty and the assumptions they have held in their practice as well as how these changes and/or transformations been defined along this continuum. Session participants will engage in scholarly dialogue with colleagues to understand other perspectives on this topic and to see the possibilities of further expansion of the topic to add to the field of research.

Breakfast Food ‘N’ Thought Sessions

Learning and Leadership Preferences of Millennial Generation
Kevin Thompson, University of Connecticut

Millennial employees have a strong desire for rapid career progression, and this motivates them to use available learning opportunities to meet job requirements (Sandeen, 2008). Previous research indicates that millennial learners have definite preferences regarding the design and format of learning experiences. This session will bring together attendee perspectives to discuss and react to the findings of the recent millennial research project. Attendees should leave the discussion with a wider view and understanding of millennial workers, a revised perspective on millennials and their desired use of technology, and thoughts about additional millennial research.

A Phenomenological Study of How Survivor Guilt Affects Performance and Learning in the Police Force
Levern O’Neal, Barry University

Losing a colleague(s) unexpectedly in the police workforce can be a very traumatic turn of events. “The traumatic loss of any one member can affect interpersonal relationships among employees as well as the entire organization (Vivona & Ty, 2011, p. 100).” The loss of a colleague(s) may not only affect the organization as a whole, but can also affect the surviving employees’ performance and learning in the workplace. Session time will explore the role of HRD in the grieving process while discussing research parameters in an area still in the stages of infancy for the field of HRD.

Preparing Manuscripts for the “Final Launch”:
HRDQ Quantitative Methods Editors Share Tips
Mariya Gavrilova Aguilar, University of Texas

A panel of past and current Quantitative Methods Editors of Human Resource Development Quarterly will share some common deficiencies in manuscripts submitted to HRDQ from the perspective of quantitative methods research. Participants will have the opportunity to ask questions related to the expectations of the quantitative editors and gain invaluable feedback on how their research can be prepared for the “final launch” - publication. Panelists will provide participants with practical tips, address issues regarding decision letters on submitted manuscripts and engage in discussion of best practices in quantitative research for the purposes of improving submissions utilizing quantitative methodologies and strengthening scholars’ approach to utilizing quantitative methodologies.

How to Plan Your Academic Career
Katie Rosenbusch, Towson University

Come enjoy a conversation with faculty from all levels: Assistant, Associate and Full Professors. They will share their joys and struggles of navigating the academic world. We will discuss the role of faculty at each stage in their career and highlight potential career development opportunities for faculty. We encourage you to come and share your insights and questions about entering the field of academia.

How the Academy was Founded!
R. Wayne Pace

Through a discussion of the past and present of the Academy of Human Resource Development, session facilitator will share the way in which the Academy was initiated and brought into being; reveal to those present the effort and dedication of the founders of the Academy; and inspire those present to honor the founders of the Academy for their vision in founding the Academy.

Conducting Meta-Analysis to Summarize CTE Research
James Bartlett, North Carolina State University
Michelle Bartlett, University of Louisville
Carissa Semanski, University of Southern Illinois
Keith Waugh, University of Southern Illinois

An introductory discussion around conducting meta-analysis research in CTE. The session will provide those in the field with perspective on the types of professional development that are available and places to find professional development related to research methods as well as a primer at an introductory level to allow the participant a general idea of the importance of meta-analysis in HRD. The purpose of the techniques, steps in the techniques, and specific uses in career and technical education will be presented.

The theme is “HRD in Turbulent Seas-Continued Global Economic Uncertainty: Challenges and Opportunities”. Over 160 papers have been accepted for presentation from HRD scholars/practitioners in over 20 countries worldwide. All papers from the various Conference Streams will be reviewed for possible publication in either Action Learning: Research and Practice, Journal of Workplace Learning, Human Resource Management (Warsaw) or the European Journal of Training and Development. There will be four Keynote Speakers as follows: Prof Wayne F Cascio-University of Colorado, Denver (USA), Prof Stephen McNair-National Institute of Continuing Education (UK), Ms Kathryn Mountford-Money Advice Service (UK), and Prof Aleksy Poczłowski-University of Krakow (Poland). Details of the conference are obtainable via ‘Google’ (UFHRD 2013 Conference) or at the following address: www.brighton.ac.uk/bbs/ufhrd2013/

Advances in Developing Human Resources (ADHR) is a quarterly journal whose single issues explore and examine discrete topics. Its unique features include:

- Research to Practice: ADHR focuses on the issues that help you work more effectively in human resource development. The journal spans the realms of performance, learning, and integrity within an organizational context. Balancing theory and practice, each issue of the journal is devoted to a different topic central to the development of human resources. ADHR has covered subjects as wide-ranging and vital as performance improvement, action learning, on-the-job training, informal learning, work-life balance, career development and HRD, leadership, and the philosophical foundations of HRD practice.

- Current and Concise: Each issue of ADHR focuses on a single topic of importance to HRD professionals. Special guest editors lead each issue. Experts in their specific fields coordinate papers from some of the most noted professionals in HRD today. Each special issue is comprehensive yet concise, giving full coverage to each specific subject area.

- Dynamic and Relevant: ADHR is easy to read and is highly relevant to both scholars and practitioners. Dealing with the demands of the global economy a diverse workforce can be difficult. From ethics to on-the-job training, from leadership development to action learning to cultural competence, ADHR gives you a quick, easy-to-use reference on each area important in your practice. Complete your library of HRD literature with the comprehensive coverage in ADHR – the essential tool for human resource development specialists.

Each issue of Advances in Developing Human Resources is available for course adoption or for use in a consulting or training environment. Multiple quantity discounts apply. For more information about submitting a proposal, or to submit a proposal to ADHR, please contact:

Human Resource Development International promotes all aspects of practice and research that explore issues of individual, group and organisational learning and performance. In adopting this perspective Human Resource Development International is committed to questioning the divide between practice and theory; between the ‘practitioner’ and the ‘academic’ between traditional and experimental methodological approaches and between organisational demands of scholarship.

Human Resource Development International is committed to a wide understanding of ‘organisation’ - one that extends through self-managed teams, voluntary work, or family businesses to global enterprises and bureaucracies. Human Resource Development International also commits itself to exploring the development of organisations and the life-long learning of people and their collectivity (organisation), their strategy and their policy, from all parts of the world. In this way Human Resource Development International will become a leading forum for debate and exploration of the interdisciplinary field of human resource development.

Human Resource Development Quarterly (HRDQ) is the first scholarly journal focused directly on the evolving field of human resource development (HRD). HRDQ is a respected forum for interdisciplinary and scholarly exchange on the subject of HRD.

HRDQ provides a central focus for research on human resource development issues as well as the means for disseminating such research. HRDQ recognizes the interdisciplinary nature of the HRD field and brings together relevant research from the related fields, such as economics, education, management, organization study, sociology, and psychology. It provides an important link in the application of theory and research to HRD practice.

Manuscript Submission

In general, HRDQ publishes theoretical and empirical work that addresses a broad range of human resource development issues and evaluation of HRD interventions and contexts. Articles concerned solely with the practice of HRD are not within the scope of this journal but may be more appropriate for practitioner-oriented publications. Authors may contribute to HRDQ by submitting manuscripts for peer review, for the non-refereed forum section, and for the media reviews section. Authors are encouraged to discuss actual and potential research and conceptual manuscripts with the editor prior to submission.

Editorial correspondence may be sent via e-mail to the Editor, Andrea D. Ellinger, andrea_ellinger@uttler.edu; or to the Managing Editor, Mary Lynn Luan at hrdq@uttler.edu.

Manuscripts can be submitted online at http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/hrdq.
