Stay at Work: A Working Solution

A program to help employers keep injured workers on the job — pays half the base wages plus expenses.

Stay at Work: It's good for business.

If you keep an injured employee connected to your workplace by providing doctor-approved light duty during recovery, you may control the impact to your employee's life — and to your bottom line.

Stay at Work pays now, and later:

- Help reduce workers' comp costs.
- Support an injured worker while recovering.
- Enhance morale in the work place.
- Retain a valued employee.
- Keep an injured worker connected to your workplace.

"Stay at Work is a nice benefit. It's nice for cross training, makes our employees feel important and adds value to our business."

– Fern Shumway, Seaport Steel, Seattle,
$30,904 in reimbursements

What does your business get?

If you can find a safe, light-duty or transitional job for your injured worker until the employee is medically cleared for full duty, Stay at Work could reimburse for:

- Half the base wage paid to the injured worker:
 - Up to 66 days within a consecutive 24-month period — up to $10,000 per claim.
- Expenses to meet the injured worker's unique needs:
 - Training fees or materials up to $1,000 per claim.
 - Tools up to $2,500 per claim.
 - Clothing up to $400 per claim.

Do I qualify?

Can you answer "yes" to all four questions below? If so, you may qualify:

- Are you paying workers' compensation premiums to L&I?
- Were you the employer when the worker was injured?
- Did the doctor give written physical restrictions that prevent your employee from doing his or her usual job?
- Do you have an available, light-duty or transitional job that the doctor has approved?

"It's a financial benefit to a company to create light-duty in the first place. Getting the Stay at Work reimbursement is even better."

– Nancy Nelson, Humanix, Spokane,
$5,252 in reimbursements
