Concurrent Breakout Sessions

SGB Financing - Applying Global Lessons Locally

1st Floor, Callista Room

Moderator: Steven Van Weede, Enclude

Too often in international development we try and recreate the wheel. In developed markets there are substantial examples of financial facilities, instruments and vehicles aimed at supporting SGBs and mobilizing private capital in support of SGBs. In this learning lab session, we will introduce some developed market initiatives, and seek to explore as a group whether we can think of other examples and whether any of these can have relevance to an emerging market setting.

The Business Case for Closing Economic Gaps between Women and Men

1st Floor, Ivory Room

Moderators: Pamela Roussos, Miller Center for Social Entrepreneurship at Santa Clara University; Mara Bolis, Oxfam; Heather Kipnis, International Finance Corporation

In this session, the Gender Inclusion Learning Lab co-chairs will continue the conversation presented at the most recent Learning Lab webinar looking at the economic reasons for gender-inclusion. During our time together we'd like to uncover: What data do you need to make the "case"? Who do you still need to convince? What questions still exist for you? We look forward to a rich and vibrant discussion and come prepared to share your favorite research on this topic.

Applied Innovation and Entrepreneurship – How to Help Social Entrepreneurs Beyond Funding

11th Floor, Room 1161

Moderator: Alexis Bonnell, USAID

Many have made investment in innovations and in social entrepreneurs, but these investments have not yet been integrated into those organizations' larger development programming. For some innovative entrepreneurs the capital curve includes transitioning "donors" to "customers". How do we navigate these innovations through our larger structures to ensure that they get USED in our current work? Join the conversation around how we socialize, share, and validate the innovations to encourage their collective adoption.

Snapshots of Impact Investing Around the World

This session will provide a multi-regional perspective on impact investing landscapes. Listen to insights on how different regions manage impact investments and come ready to discuss the challenges, breakthroughs and future of impact investing across different regions.
