Dear HR Professional,

This year’s California HR Conference hosted by the Professionals In Human Resources Association (PIHRA) is shaping up to be one of our best conferences yet. The location in beautiful Long Beach couldn’t be better, and our lineup of speakers is beyond exceptional this year.

From beginning to end and every workshop and social event in between, the California HR Conference will be a career-changing experience for all of the attendees. That’s why I would like to take a moment and personally invite you to join us on August 29 – August 31, 2016.

This year we have seven professional tracks to choose from and 70+ concurrent sessions. I invite you to follow one of our tracks or design your own to fit your personal needs. The decision is up to you—but either way, our program is approved for up to 16.75 SHRM Professional Development Credits. It’s also been submitted to the HR Certification Institute for 16.75 HR Certification Institute recertification credits.

Additionally, you will have the opportunity to network under palm trees with some of the best HR professionals in the business, as well as the 2,300 practitioners, providers and presenters who will be attending this year.

Register by July 31, 2016 and save up to $50 off the onsite registration rate—and get the chance to select your preferred social events. For assistance with registration, please email programs@pihra.org or call (310) 416-1210.

success and failure? Years of research has told us all about competencies, conditions and processes needed to achieve success. Everywhere you look there is a theory offered regardless of being rooted in actual research or grounded in common sense without empirical evidence. So what is the right mix? The answer to this question lies not in the ingredients but rather in the desired product. In HR, this means finding an HR leader who can drive results while maintaining competitive advantage with potential talent. The goal is to be the flag bearer for employers while driving your organizational strategy. This means you attract talent, you grow talent, and you retain talent better than others in your industry and beyond. This session will provide insights into achieving success by highlighting research around three core qualities of successful HR leaders.

Avoiding the Quit and Stay Phenomenon: Engage and Retain Your Best Employees

Mega Session

Shari Harley
President, Founder, Candid Culture, Inc.
During challenging economic times, when turnover is low, employees still quit. They just don’t leave the building. Quit and stay is the phenomenon of employees becoming disengaged and less productive while waiting for the economy to improve and for other roles to become available. Quit and stay is an unfortunate but avoidable phenomena. Do you know which of your employees are engaged and committed to your organization? Do you have a plan for those who are not? Identify the key drivers of employee engagement, retention and performance and develop a loyal and committed workforce.

Stuart Crabb
Director of Learning at Facebook
In a single generation, our world has shifted dramatically to one that is fast moving, and highly unpredictable. In many organizations the shift has fostered a mindset that shows little regard for their role in driving the elements of what makes a life worth living and applying these insights to help people perform more effectively at work. Stuart Crabb, part of the senior leadership team at Facebook, has assisted in Facebook being at the forefront in developing progressive people policies and practices that have been instrumental in creating one of the most desirable places to work in the world, where pride in the mission of the company, desire to have impact, and loyalty to the organization consistently score among the most important dimensions of success.
