Site Traffic, Conversion Rate, Click-Thru and ROI are Top Performance Metrics for SEM Programs

Metrics Tracked To Gauge the Success of SEM Programs

"What metrics do you track / measure / generally pay attention to gauge the success of Search Engine Marketing programs?"

More than 50% of respondents tracked the following success metrics for the SEM campaigns: site traffic, conversion, click-thru rate, ROI, cost-per-click, cost-per-action, cost of sales generation, and sales volume.

Agencies were more likely to track all metrics by about a margin of 10-20% in the case of all metrics.

These figures are very consistent with the 2006 and 2007 surveys.

Advertisers Plan to Increase Their Spending on Paid Placement Moderately in 2009

Spending Expectations for 2009

"How much more or less do you expect to spend in 2009 compared to 2008 for "Paid Placement" programs (including all forms of expenditures noted above)?"

- A little over half of advertisers planned to increased their spending on paid placement campaigns in 2009, a significant drop from two-thirds of respondents who reported they planned on increasing spending last year.
- Almost a third of advertiser respondents expect to spend the same as last year, a jump from 18% who reported they planned on spending the same last year.
- Yet only 14% of advertisers claim they plan on spending less in 2009 than in 2008.
- Overall, the data indicates an increasing conservatism the past two years among advertiser respondents.

Advertisers report increasing satisfaction levels with their agencies

Opinion on SEM Service Providers

"How happy have you been in the past year with the services delivered by the primary SEM service provider you engage for Paid Placement programs?"

- More than half (54%) of respondents said they were happy ("moderately" or "very") with their SEM agencies for paid placement campaigns; this is a significant leap from 2007 (42%) and 2006 (33%)
- Fewer than one in five respondents are unhappy ("moderately" or "very") – similar to last year’s survey
- Less than one-third of advertisers report “mixed results” when asked for their satisfaction level

Advertisers Are Still Overwhelmingly Interested in Behavioral Targeting Opportunities

- Three-quarters of advertisers indicated they were willing to pay more for behavioral targeting opportunities, particularly for in-market consumers.
- There is split interest in demographic targeting that allows marketers to reach certain demographics such as age and gender, however advertisers are not particularly enthralled by the prospect of daypart targeting.
- Advertisers on average would pay about 10% more for both demographic and daypart targeting, and 13% more for behavioral targeting.

Willingness to Pay More for Certain Types of Targeting

"Are you willing to bid more for clicks based on the following types of targeting criteria"

Search Retargeting Based on Behavior Is Still In Its Infancy, Despite Strong Interest

- While advertiser interest in behavioral targeting is very strong and virtually unchanged from last year, actual investment is still low
- Two in five advertisers said they are not currently targeting or retargeting searchers but plan to in the next 12 months
- Over a third (34%) said they are not currently targeting or retargeting searchers and do not plan to in the next 12 months
- More than two in five (44%) said they were targeting searchers either through an ad network, a portal or who had previously visited their site
