

VPhA: Privacy Policy

VPhA respects your privacy and protects any personal information that may be provided to VPhA to facilitate use of its electronic services.

We request from users of VPhA's online services only information that is necessary for VPhA to provide high-quality online services.

We do not sell personal data, such as email addresses, to other entities.

Contact information of VPhA members may be made available to another member of VPhA upon request and review of said request by the VPhA staff and/or Board of Directors. Members have the opportunity to opt out of sharing of personal data with other members of VPhA. Elected officials of VPhA shall retain the ability to access appropriate member contact information to carry out required responsibilities.

We may from time to time share your contact information with outside vendors for the purpose of providing membership services; such vendors are screened by the VPhA staff and Board of Directors and their use of any data is strictly limited to uses approved by VPhA.

Under no circumstances, with the exceptions of cooperation with a law enforcement investigation or pursuant to a court order, will VPhA share credit card or any other personal financial information with any entity other than those financial institutions with which VPhA maintains business accounts to process payments.
