Distinguished Members of the Criminal Justice Community:

Welcome to Las Vegas and the 41st annual meeting of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences. While you are attending the fascinating panel discussions and roundtables to examine current issues and events that are facing law enforcement today, be assured that the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department applauds your efforts. It is men and women like you, facilitating the pursuit of knowledge and the exchange of ideas in our profession, who ensure the criminal justice discipline continues to grow and keep pace with the challenges we face today and in the future.

As we all know, Las Vegas is one of the fastest growing cities in the country. That growth produces significant community challenges, particularly for law enforcement. The Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department is committed to protecting the people, their property and rights, while providing the best public safety and services in partnership with our community. That commitment and dedication extends to the nearly 40 million visitors that Las Vegas plays host to each year.

I'm committed to continually improving our Department. With the knowledge gained in exchanges such as your annual meeting and the commitment of the members of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department, I will meet that goal. I thank you for your contribution to that improvement through your participation in the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences annual meeting. Enjoy your time in Las Vegas.

Sincerely,

BILL YOUNG, SHERIFF

Greetings!

Welcome to Las Vegas and the 41st Annual Meeting of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences. I hope you are prepared for a stimulating meeting and an enjoyable time reconnecting with friends and colleagues from around the world.

This year’s theme, “Crime Prevention: One Goal, Multiple Approaches,” pays homage to the hope we all have that our efforts, as academics and practitioners, lead to less crime and deviance in society. While the term “crime prevention” is rarely used in relation to many of our efforts, almost every one of us is engaged in studying the crime prevention efficacy of the criminal justice system and social policies, or we are actively involved in the delivery of programs or services which we hope will lead to lower crime levels. The diversity of our efforts is evident in the panels, roundtables and workshops, which make up this year's program.

A great deal of thanks has to go to Larry Travis and the program committee for all their hard work at putting together this excellent program. This year’s meeting is possibly the largest in the history of the Academy, with over 370 panels/roundtables/workshops, consisting of more than 1200 individual presentations by over 2000 participants. I want to draw your attention to the various Feature Panels throughout the program. These panels were created by members of the program committee to highlight key topics and issues within their substantive areas. You should also note several panels organized by members of the National Institute of Justice which address federal funding opportunities as well as recent projects sponsored by the federal government. I am grateful for their offer of assistance with the program.

I am pleased to point out two special presentations being made on Thursday. I am very happy that Gloria Laycock, Director of the Jill Dando Institute of Crime Science in London accepted my invitation to join us this year and offer her insights on “Crime Prevention at Federal and State Level: How Are We Doing?” at 10:15 on Thursday morning. Following that presentation, John P. Walters, Director, White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, will address the national drug control policy and research needs and issues. I hope that you will show a warm welcome to both of these individuals.

After a long day attending panels, I hope you join us for a reception on both Wednesday and Thursday evenings before you head out to enjoy the environs of Las Vegas. This is a city with something for everyone, from good food to extravagant stage productions to musical theater to games of chance to good shopping. Whatever you enjoy, you can find it here.

I hope everyone has a safe and wonderful time this week.

Steve Lab
Welcome to Las Vegas! The Program Committee for the 41st Annual Meeting of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences has done an outstanding job in developing what promises to be the largest meeting in the history of the Academy. The committee worked tirelessly in organizing nearly 400 panels, workshops, roundtables, and other sessions reflecting our theme of Crime Prevention: One Goal, Multiple Approaches.

We tried to schedule sessions so that there would be topics of interest to participants at all time periods, and to minimize the number of times that presentations on similar topics occur at the same time. Of course, with the size of the program, it was not always possible to avoid conflicts. Still, I believe this program offers an excellent opportunity to participate in sessions and to share our research, experiences, and knowledge about crime, criminal justice, and crime prevention.

Shelley Listwan, our local arrangements chair has developed a variety of useful information about Las Vegas and local travel. In addition, she and her institution, the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, have been very helpful to us as we work to present a successful and memorable meeting.

It was a challenge serving with the Program Committee this year as we instituted the on-line submission process. It was an honor to serve the Academy, and I am proud of the work of my committee. Of course, I had it easy with the help and support of Steve Lab, who worked at least as hard on the program as did I, and the staff of the national office. Laura Monaco and Collene Gantner have both responded to the challenges of producing the annual meeting while keeping the Academy running smoothly in all its other domains. They have my gratitude and deserve the thanks of all program participants.

This is Las Vegas. The 2004 Program Committee has developed a program that is intellectually stimulating and professionally rewarding. The City of Las Vegas is noted for its entertainment and social values. I suspect this combination will make the 2004 Annual Meeting of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences the best ever.

REEL JUSTICE INTERACTIVE MOVIE CD-ROM
WILL Interactive

This unique interactive movie takes the concept of active learning to a whole new level, enabling students to take on the role of one of the story's characters and influence key plot turns by making choices for that character. The movie, centered on a domestic violence incident that takes place in a college town, allows students to explore course concepts and terminology in a relevant and meaningful context. Movie segments are augmented by a robust array of review and assessment features. With this breakthrough learning tool, students can explore a wide variety of criminal justice issues firsthand—criminal responsibility, theories of crime causation, civil vs. criminal law, police roles, functions, and ethics, the courts, and more—and master course concepts more completely than they could by just reading any text. Reel Justice is a catalyst for insightful discussion and a stimulating classroom involvement.

ICPSR SUMMER PROGRAM
In Quantitative Methods Of Social Research

June–August 2004

The annual ICPSR Summer Program in Quantitative Methods is a comprehensive, integrated program of studies in research design, statistics, data analysis, and social methodology.

Typical four-week courses include Regression Analysis, Bayesian Methods, Game Theory, and Maximum Likelihood Estimation.

Shorter workshops include general topics such as Spatial Analysis/GIS and Multilevel Models, as well as the use of specific datasets, such as Census 2000 and Aging/Gerontology.

Quantitative Analysis of Crime and Criminal Justice Seminar

This four-week seminar from late June to mid-July introduces participants to major surveys sponsored by the Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) and focuses on innovative applications of survey methods and incident-based data in criminal justice. Each participant will design and conduct a quantitative research project. Applicants must show evidence of intellectual interest in and commitment to this substantive area. Stipend support for those admitted is provided by BJS.

Position Announcement
Sam Houston State University
College of Criminal Justice

In response to sustained and substantial growth, the College of Criminal Justice is searching to fill as many as four full time tenure track positions for the Fall, 2004 semester. Rank for these positions will be open and dependent upon qualifications. A Ph.D. or other terminal degree in criminal justice, criminology, law, psychology, or a closely related field is required. We are seeking specializations in one or more of the following areas: criminology, forensic science, law, and statistics. We are especially interested in candidates with active programs of research, success with external funding, commitment to teaching. We are deeply committed to establishing and maintaining a diverse working and learning environment.

The College of Criminal Justice has a large undergraduate student population pursuing B.A. and B.S. programs in criminal justice and victim studies. The College also offers the M.A. in Criminal Justice and Criminology, as well as M.S. programs in Criminal Justice Management and in Forensic Science. The College also offers a Ph.D. in Criminal Justice and works collaboratively with the University’s Ph.D. program in Forensic Psychology. More information about the College, the University, and the community can be found at: www.shsu.edu.

Interested individuals should send a letter of interest specifying the position in which they are interested, a current vita, examples of scholarly work, and a minimum of four letters of reference to Dr. Phillip Lyons, Search Committee Chair, College of Criminal Justice, Sam Houston State University, Huntsville, TX 77341-2296.

Graduate Programs in Criminal Justice

The College of Criminal Justice offers a Doctor of Philosophy degree in Criminal Justice, a Master of Arts degree in Criminal Justice and Criminology, a Master of Science in Criminal Justice Management, a Master of Science in Forensic Science and a Master of Science in Criminal Justice. The Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts programs are designed primarily to prepare graduate students to conduct research in the various areas of criminological theory, crime control, correctional and police administration, and social rehabilitation. These programs are based on a multidisciplinary study of the behavioral sciences as they apply to these specialized areas. The Masters of Science degree programs are designed to provide graduates with the analytical tools necessary to diagnose, analyze, and solve day-to-day problems encountered by criminal justice professionals. Graduates from the College of Criminal Justice touch literally every facet of the criminal justice system by their contributions to the public and private sectors and by conducting research on all aspects of crime and crime control.

Lessons from Comparative/International Criminology
Edited by John Winterdyk and Liqun Cao

This book is an anthology of esteemed scholars who have made a significant contribution to the discipline of criminology/criminal justice/international law within a comparative/international context.

The book is an excellent resource for comparative and international researchers, teachers, and students. The lively discussion reveals the path to distinguished careers in criminology and criminal justice and speculates on where the field is heading. Authors also offer their advice and experiences to students who might be interested in the general discipline. In addition to a selected bibliography, teachers and students will find this to be an invaluable guide.

A Political Analysis of Deviance: New Edition
Edited by Pat Lauderdale, Justice Studies, Arizona State University

Facing more terrorism, war, and unending conflicts over what is deviant, it may be time again to listen to the powerful voices in A Political Analysis of Deviance. The messages reveal the importance of studying deviance and diversity as politics, and how we might transcend the current vulgar debate over freedom fighters versus terrorists. The first edition of the book, published in 1980, was the model for understanding whom and what controls the moral boundaries separating good from bad. In the new foreword, Pat Lauderdale raises questions about the current usefulness of the model. The chapters in the book examine political life and its relationship to the study of deviance that often are ignored or suffocated before they become public. Now, we must ask innovative questions about our moral judgments and our fate as we move into this new century.

Israel Studies in Criminology Vol.8
Edited by Shlomo G. Shoham and Paul Knepper

Founded by Shlomo Shoham, this series has brought criminology in the Israeli context to the English-speaking world since 1970. We welcome contributions on the broad range of criminological issues, including the etiology of crime, terrorist violence, victimology, crime prevention, law and civil rights, conflict resolution, government interventions in Israel, and issues related Jewish populations worldwide.

International Comparison of Crime and Victimization: The ICVS
Edited by Helmut Kury

This volume is dedicated to the International Crime (Victim) Survey. It describes the intent of the survey, and the possibilities and limitations of measuring crime and comparing data internationally. The authors trace the development of the project and presents findings from the recent 2001 survey, including gender and age differences in crime victimization, fear of crime in different countries, attitudes to punishment in different countries, and future intentions and implications of the ICVS.

The Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences has officially adopted and reaffirms their policies as follows:

No member of the Academy shall, on the grounds of race, color religion, gender, age, handicap, national origin, marital status, sexual orientation, pregnancy, or veteran status be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to, discrimination in this organization.

No member shall be subject to sexual harassment in ACJS related programs and activities. Sexual harassment includes, but is not limited to, physical or verbal abuse of a sexual nature including graphic comments about an individual's body, sexually degrading remarks used to describe an individual, or unwelcome propositions and physical advances of a sexual nature. Sexual harassment also includes the threat or insinuation that lack of sexual submission will be used as a basis for decisions affecting or interfering with an individual's organizational standing.

It is the policy of the Academy that minorities and women shall be involved and encouraged to participate as active members in all activities of ACJS, including policy and decision making.

No one participating in the ACJS Annual Meeting shall have on his or her person a weapon of any type.

The Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences is a professional organization supporting affirmative action to ensure equal opportunities in programs, activities and employment, regardless of race, religion, national origin, age and gender.

By attending an Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences' meeting, attendees agree to comply with the Academy's Code of Ethics.

The AJCS Code of Ethics is available for review at www.acjs.org
