

Paul Doda is Global Litigation Counsel at Elsevier Inc., the Science, Technical and Medical publisher with offices throughout the US, Europe, Asia, Latin America and other parts of the world. Paul previously served as Deputy General Counsel-Litigation for Elsevier. Paul's primary areas of practice are commercial litigation and dispute resolution, with an increasing focus on copyright enforcement and anti-piracy matters. During Paul's tenure with Elsevier, the company has litigated civil copyright cases and initiated criminal copyright referrals in various countries, including the US, Germany, Switzerland, India, Vietnam, and South Korea.

Paul currently serves as Chairman of the Association of American Publishers' (AAP) Online Piracy Working Group and is a member of the International Publishers Association's (IPA) Anti-Piracy Task Force, the AAP's International Copyright Protection Committee, and the Science, Technical and Medical Publishers' Association's (STM) Enforcement Task Force. Prior to joining Elsevier in 2007, Paul was Vice President and Assistant General Counsel at Elsevier's sister company, LexisNexis, where he represented several businesses in the legal information industry. Before moving in house, Paul was a litigator in private practice with the law firm Sills Cummis in New Jersey.

Paul earned his JD in 1991 from Villanova Law School, where he was a member and Symposium Editor of the Villanova Law Review, and earned his undergraduate degree from Montclair State College, summa cum laude, in 1987.
