Greetings
Mutual Family~

As I write this, we are finally beginning to dry out from the "Noah’s Ark" type rains of this spring. Area farmers are scrambling to get their crops in the ground, and many of us are trying to catch our breath after being slammed with several tornados and hail events we’ve already experienced this spring.

No matter where you stand on climate change... is it really a thing, is it man-made or not man-made, I don’t think there is one of us involved in the insurance industry that would say there is any such thing as “normal weather” anymore. In the past, we would worry about tornados April thru October, and hail was something we saw during the dog-days of summer. Not anymore! Now, we have tornados in February and hail all year long!

Aside from gambling bookies, it seems insurance folks deal with the most unpredictable factors in their business. Add human-nature to mother-nature, and you have a recipe for an extremely challenging business. Thankfully, we have IAMIC to help us find our way thru the challenges, as well as each when we need a sympathetic ear to bend.

This year, IAMIC has presented some great events, including our claims seminar that had a record attendance. The Illinois Department of Insurance director, Robert Rapp spoke at both our claims and underwriting seminars, and seems to be developing an appreciation for the mutual part of the Illinois insurance industry.

The regionals allowed me to visit Effingham and meet some of the directors from the southern part of our state. That opportunity drove home the realization that no matter what part of the state you visit, mutual directors want only the best for their mutual and their policy holders.

I hope we’ll see both old and new faces at our convention, which is taking place at the Bloomington Marriott on August 20–22. My theme “United We Stand ~ Strength In Numbers” really reflects how I feel about our industry and how we must think if we expect to continue to exist to serve our often underserved areas of our state. We need to strive to make each and every mutual strong, both financially and in knowledge, so that our numbers do not continue dwindle. We must be there for each other, and help when able, so that we can move together into the future.

I hope you’ll join us at the upcoming convention only a few short months away. You should be seeing a flyer shortly, and you can always visit the IAMIC website at www.IAMIC.org to register on-line. It’s a quick and easy way to cross that task off your list!

Wishing you a summer of sunny skies and gentle breezes, ❖

2017 is almost half way over and the Illinois Mutuals have been faced with several hail and wind storms but are doing well. IAMIC kicked off this year with an outstanding Claims seminar that brought a wealth of information to our attendees and had record attendance. Our Regional meetings as well as the Underwriting also were very well received and provided members with some great tools to use in their daily operations.

IAMIC’s first annual Golf Outing is June 22nd and the proceeds will fund the Joe Reid Scholarship that provides financial assistance to members who travel to Washington DC to participate in our NAMIC Congressional Contacts Program. This year we were able to provide three scholarships—Beth Wingerter from Randolph Mutual; Meg McConville from Peru Waltham Mutual; and Clint Huffstutler from Hamlet Mutual. Congratulations to our winners and thank you for taking the voice of the Illinois Mutuals to Capitol hill.

Our convention plans are coming together and it is sure to bring several fantastic educational sessions and a whole lot of fun! Our committee has worked hard to make sure that this event is top notch and that everyone will have the opportunity to meet new vendors, gain valuable knowledge about our industry, network with peers to gather new insights, and relax and enjoy some time together. Save the dates and plan to join us August 20–22 in the beautiful Marriott Hotel in Bloomington/Normal.

Our advocacy efforts have been a great success this year as our Lobbyist, Chris Davis, has been monitoring the state issues while NAMIC staff has been working on the federal issues. While the main issues have not been specific to Farm Mutuals, our staff has been making sure there are no bills that would inadvertently effect our industry. Monitoring the authority within the Federal Insurance Office (FIO) is imperative to keeping state based regulation strong which keeps our Farm Mutual Act protected. Please continue to assist NAMIC in its efforts to education our elected officials.

IAMIC recently mailed out the Financial Analysis data to all the managers. This is a comparison compilation of the Illinois Mutuals that are like your Mutual. While there are always many factors that go into these figures, it is a starting point for conversations when reviewing your specific financials. Our goal is to bring awareness to the Mutuals so you can be pro-active. If IAMIC can be of any assistance, please reach out to our office at 217-563-8300. As I always say—I don’t know all the answers, but I know the people who do and I will be glad to connect the dots!

I wish you all a wonderful summer—take time to enjoy your friends and family. Go on that trip you always wanted, visit that friend you haven’t seen for a while, and just sit on the porch and relax. I look forward to seeing you all in August—for now, I’m heading to the deck to take my own advice.

Communication is Key!

Where Did the Small Claims Go?

Whatever happened to the small claim? It seems like every claim submitted involves several thousand dollars. Even simple glass breakage claims that used to be a few hundred dollars can now cost over $1,500. We began to notice this trend some time ago and decided to take a closer look at the issue. Utilizing the database that has been compiled on farm mutual companies over the past 20+ years, we wanted to see if our observations were correct. The information was gathered from annual statements submitted to state insurance departments by mutual insurance companies located across the country. It was not surprising to see claim costs increasing, but what did surprise us was the acceleration of claim costs in recent years. We would encourage you to take a moment to look at what claim costs are doing at your company.

To calculate your companies average claim cost simply divide the total loss dollars paid by the number of claims reported in a year. To get an accurate trend we suggest you look at the past 10 years in your review. Results may vary depending on the number of claims reported. A company with few claims reported in a year may see wild fluctuations as opposed to a company that has a larger number of claims each year. In both cases if you compare several years of claim data I suspect you will see a sharp increase in the cost of your claims.

So what is causing the sharp increase? We can’t blame the national inflation rate since it has remained at or below 3% the past 10 years. We believe several other factors could be to blame.

- In the past ten years the way we mitigate or repair items has changed dramatically. Costs such as removing hail-damaged paint from a house to replacing a steel panel on a grain bin has increased dramatically. What was once easily repaired is now not so easy. The basic cost has not changed, but procedures required by the EPA and OSHA have added to the cost.
- Many items are designed to be replaced rather than repaired; we now deal with more disposable products.
- How do you define damage? When did splatter marks from hail become hail damage? When did it become necessary to replace all sides of a building when only one side was damaged? Your definition of damage makes a big difference to the average claim cost.
- Insureds have more “stuff” than ever imagined. How many of you have been surprised by the value and amount of
There are many other potential reasons for the increase in claim costs. The expectations of a new generation of insureds, outside influences such as public adjusting firms and government constraints are just a few of the additional developments or changes that have impacted these costs.

Is there anything an Illinois Farm Mutual can do to control rising claims costs? Absolutely!!!

damaged contents submitted to you? In many cases, the list is close to, or may exceed, the entire contents coverage.

- Our policies are changing. We used to apply depreciation, but today more insureds have replacement cost, not just on the home but on contents, and in some cases the farm service buildings.

There are many other potential reasons for the increase in claim costs. The expectations of a new generation of insureds, outside influences such as public adjusting firms and government constraints are just a few of the additional developments or changes that have impacted these costs. Were any of these factors considered and discussed when you developed your rates?

Is there anything an Illinois Farm Mutual can do to control rising claims costs? Absolutely!!! Up to this point we have focused on claims, but it will be good underwriting that will determine the prosperity of your company. Here are some underwriting tools you may want to consider:

- Add a cosmetic loss endorsement on all properties, or at least the farm properties. It is likely that your current rate is inadequate to pay for cosmetic losses.

- Increase the deductible. This may sound like a broken record, but it works. A few years ago many policies changed to a $1,000 deductible. Is it time to consider a $1,500 or higher deductible?

- Re-evaluate your rate class. You may not need a rate increase, but may need to reclassify a risk. Are you offering a lower rate on buildings that do not deserve it? In several cases the lowest rate has the highest loss ratio.

- Schedule items instead of putting them on a blanket. In most cases, scheduled items have a better loss ratio than blanket items. Why? Oftentimes the item is properly valued when it is scheduled whereas the blanket is often undervalued.

- Consider a per-structure minimum. Many of us have a minimum premium policy, why not a minimum premium per structure? How many buildings do you have where the annual premium is less than $25? If your average claim is over $700, and many are, then how long can you afford to subsidize that building?

These are just a few tools we can use to remain a viable mutual company. 2016 was a good year for many companies in Illinois; let’s see if we can make 2017 even better.

Homeowners Responsibility—Mitigating Further Damage

When accidents or disasters occur, it is important that homeowners make an attempt to mitigate or prevent further damage to their homes. Not only is this important to protect their very valuable possession…their home…, but most insurance policies include language that holds the homeowner responsible for mitigation in order to reduce the amount of the claim. In fact, damage that occurs from failure to mitigate may result in the homeowner paying a portion of the repairs out of their own pockets. Whether the loss is caused by water, fire or storm damage, it is essential to promptly respond by hiring a professional restoration company to mitigate the loss in order to protect the home and the homeowner.

One such loss that can cause significant damage and happens to be the most common type of property claim is water damage. In any situation, water — where it does not belong — is always an emergency. This requires a quick response to ensure the structure is dried properly to prevent mold and additional damages. There are many causes of water loss to structures including sump pump failure, back-up of sewer and drains, ice maker water lines that fail, burst or frozen pipes, etc. Contingent upon where the loss occurs and what surfaces are impacted, a professional restoration company will extract, set up fans and dehumidifiers, as well as manipulate your content to ensure both your structure and your valuables are dried properly.

An additional loss that requires a quick response is fire damage. Depending on the severity of the fire, a homeowner may need to board-up windows and/or doors, or tarp the roof in order to mitigate further damage resulting from weather. In addition, prompt extraction of water and drying of the structure may be necessary. Hiring a professional restoration company to assess the damage and address all of these issues is critical. In addition, restoration companies will help the homeowner with sorting content and determining what is salvageable and what is not. They will quickly remove clothing and items that can be cleaned and restored to pre-loss condition.

Another type of loss that causes significant damage to homes is storms. This type of loss occurs frequently in the Midwest. Protection of life and property when a weather-related event occurs is vital. Most components that are impacted due to a storm are on the exterior of the structure, such as roofing, siding, windows, etc. In addition, storms that produce significant wind can result in severe tree damage to homes. Proper trimming and maintenance of trees near the structure can lessen chances of a tree falling. If a home or building is damaged, mitigating further damage is key. From tarping the roof to restoring power, immediate action needs to be taken. A professional restoration company would be able to perform all necessary actions to prevent further damage and secure the home or property.

As you can see, mitigating further damage to a home when a loss occurs is essential. Whether a homeowner suffers a loss resulting from water, fire or storm damage, the quicker they hire a professional restoration company to assess the damage and assist in restoring their home, the better they will be. In addition, restoration companies work closely with the insurance company and property claims specialists to ensure the homeowner is protected and their property restored quickly and efficiently.
